W[illegible] Charge Bulgaria With [illegible] Revolutionary Movement in Macedonia—Austrian Indignation Is Directed Against Turkey.

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Vienna, May 2.—It is said here that in consequence of the Salonica outrages the Turkish government will address a memorandum to the great powers accusing Bulgaria of responsibility for the recent happenings in Macedonia. It is further asserted that Turkey will bring forcible pressure to bear against the principality in case it does not cease to aid the revolutionary movement.

On the other hand the Bulgarians declare that their government has been [illegible] affected by these outrages, which it feels have damaged the Macedonian movement, but that it is powerless against the Macedonian desperadoes.

In official circles here indignation is expressed at Turkey's negligence in failing to take precautions to prevent the outrages, particularly as the authorities had been warned that something of the kind was expected.

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Salonica, European Turkey, May 2.—The number of Bulgarians killed during the recent dynamite riots is now estimated at 100. A complete bomb-manufacturing plant has been discovered in a shoemaker's shop communicating by an underground passage with the Ottoman bank.

It is feared that the presence of the three Austrian warships which have arrived here will encourage the Bulgarians to irritate the Turks, who up to the present time have behaved well.

Bush[illegible] here is [illegible].

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Paris, May 2.—A dispatch received here from Salonica says the police in their search for persons suspected of being concerned in the outrages discovered that the revolutionists had mined the principal districts of the town with the intention of blowing them up simultaneously; but circumstances forced them to act before their preparations had been completed and the planned disaster was averted. The Turkish population however is dangerously inflamed. It is estimated that 300 persons are dead as the result of the outbreak. One thousand arrests have been made.

Russia Is Said to Have Greatly Strengthened New-chwang and to Have Supplemented Regular Garrisons by Chinese Troops—Japanese Discuss Advisability of Aggressive Action.

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Victoria, B. C., May 2.—Mail advices were received here that New-chwang is being strengthened by the Russians, who have expressed to the Chinese authorities that this course was made inevitable. Russia may [illegible] conflict with a [illegible] power. It is [illegible] that [illegible] new regiments of Chinese troops in Manchuria as an auxiliary to the regular garrisons. A number of them will be added which will make the total number 50,000.

THE ATTITUDE OF THE JAPANESE.

The Yomiuri Shimbun of Tokio has had an interview with [illegible] Takahashi, one of Japan's eminent jurists, in which the Manchurian question is discussed. He suggests that if Russia refuses to withdraw her troops from Manchuria, Japan should also send an army to Mukden. Manchuria, he says, may be considered a neutral territory.

The Asahi Shimbun, discussing the Manchurian question, suggests that Japan take advantage of the provision of her commercial treaty with China to open new ports in Manchuria. [illegible]-king, at the mouth of the Yalu, and a point higher up the Yalu, are the places suggested. The Asahi says that what Han-kow is to Shang-hai, [illegible] is to New-chwang, and the opening of the port would facilitate Japan's Manchurian trade.

AN INSURRECTION IN HO-NAN PROVINCE.

News comes from Shang-hai of an insurrection which has broken out at Hetaching-fu and Meng-hsien in Ho-nan province. Indignant at the extortion of the officials on the pretense of having to raise funds for the indemnity to the foreign powers, the inhabitants revolted. The yamens at both places were attacked and destroyed and the officials fled. The rising is interfering with the operations of the Peking syndicate (British) which has mining and railway works in Ho-nan.

SERIOUS HAVOC CAUSED BY CLEVELAND ACCIDENT

Four Persons Dead and 27 Others Injured, Some of Them Fatally—Carelessness of a New Girl in a Toy Torpedo Factory Caused Explosion.

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Cleveland, Ohio, May 2.—An explosion that caused death and destruction occurred in the plant of the Thor Manufacturing company at [illegible] Orange street, this afternoon. Thus far four persons are dead, while 27 others are lying in hospitals, some fatally and others more or less seriously injured.

The dead:

MRS. MAURICE COHEN, aged 40.
SEATON COHEN, aged 12.
BENJAMIN COHEN, aged 23.
HARRY GLUECKMANN, aged 15, sick of typhoid fever in a neighboring house, died as result of shock.

The Injured.

Mrs. Anna Stone, left eye torn out, severe scalp wounds, lips cut, right cheek through the jaw bone, and bruises about the shoulder; Lizzie Stone, aged 5, end of tongue torn away and badly cut about head; Vera Stone, aged 3, slightly cut about head; Miss Lulu Hahn, aged 20, cut about head, face and hands, cut on head; A. W. Horowitz, cut about ears and deep cut in right temple, also severe scalp wound; Mary Gotshwitz, aged 16, compound fracture of left arm, badly bruised, in serious condition; Wilbur Cole, aged 20, face cut, portion of nose torn away; Florence Blitzstein, aged 22, seriously cut about face and head; Mrs. Henry Quass, head cut, also cut on body, injuries serious; Harry Quass, aged 5, suffering from shock; Mabel Quass, aged 3, suffering from shock and cut about body; Mamie Glover, aged 16, suffering from shock, eye blown out; Mrs. J. J. Miller, cut about head; Jacob Cohen, aged 18, badly cut about the body; Harry Cohen, aged 14, badly cut about the face and body; Ella Esterbrook, aged 11, thrown against furnace and injured; Lizzie Stern, aged 8, cut by flying glass; Mrs. Esterbrook, cut on forehead and bad cut on scalp; B. Holland, shoulder sprained, badly bruised; Miss L. Page, scalp and ears torn, badly bruised; Will o. Forte, badly bruised; Augusta Wolf, thrown to pavement, face torn; Arthur Convoy, aged 14, cut and bruised; Lillie Althoff, bruised; Stella Hertzel, Daisy Foutz, Kattie Fischer, Belle Griffiths, all employed at the torpedo factory, were cut and bruised.

Cause of the Accident.

The Thor Manufacturing company is engaged in the manufacture of toy torpedo canes and other explosives. The company was in the midst of its busiest season and extra girls were being employed.

The force of the explosion was tremendous and windows within a radius of a quarter of a mile were broken.

In a house on Orange street next to the factory lived Maurice Cohen, his wife and eight children. With the collapse of the house simultaneously with the explosion the woman and four children were caught in the falling partitions and all were horribly bruised. All were taken out unconscious. Three of this family are dead. The fire which caused the explosion originated in a peculiar manner. The torpedo canes are filled in molds and there is constant danger of some of the loose powder, supposed to be fulminate of mercury, dropping on the floor. For this reason the girls and boys who are employed in the factory are compelled to remove their shoes while at work, so as to avoid the danger of striking sparks. The explosion was due to the carelessness of a new girl who had been employed at the plant less than a week. Some of the girls had their shoes on at the lunch hour and one playfully shoved another. As the girl slid along the floor her shoes struck a spark in some loose powder. Instantly the floor was ablaze.

The flames were easily subdued by the firemen after the explosion but there was nothing left of the factory but a pile of debris.

The property loss sustained by the torpedo company will not exceed $10,000.

GALA[illegible] MEN [illegible] V[illegible] Y. M. C. A.

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Topeka, May 2.—The principal address before the morning session of the Railroad Y. M. C. A. was made by the Rev. Dr. H. H. Gregg of St. Louis. Another topic was the religious life of the railroad men; the discussion of which was led by F. B. Goodman of New York. He was assisted by John Caldwell on the subject of "Prayer" and Robert Gary, who spoke on "Bible Study."

At the afternoon session H. E. Rosevear, state secretary of the Kentucky associations, conducted a prayer and testimony service. He asked those who had been Christians more than 10 years to say a few words. Up jumped an old engineer, eager to be first. He said that the associations were good coaling stations on the road to glory; that he had a box full of sand to keep his drivers from slipping, and that he was going to make a clear run through. After many others had spoken, a veteran engineer of the Delaware & Lackawanna road pleaded with the railroad men "not to try to sneak by the signals that are set against you." It was one of the most spectacular meetings ever held by an association.

John McCook of New York spoke of the great work the association is doing in bringing together the employer and the employed and said this benefit is growing more marked every day.

Tonight addresses were delivered by Belden P. Spencer, of St. Louis, on "Breadth and Depth," and by Dr. Elmore Harris, of Toronto, on the "Christian Railroad Man and the Bible."

"Report that Colonel Ericson has been captured by Yaquis absolutely false and without a shadow of foundation. There is no Colonel Ericson, millionaire, in Sonora.

REAPPEARANCE OF THE PLAGUE AT MAZATLAN

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Mazatlan, Mexico, May 2.—There is much alarm here over the reappearance of the plague. Two persons who were [illegible] at the quarantine at the observation station were attacked. PRESIDENT [illegible] WILL RIDE IN [illegible] ORDINARY CARRIAGE

President Roosevelt will be driven while in Colorado Springs behind a handsome team attached to a new and elegant carriage. This is as far as the committee in charge of the day can proceed.

Instructions were received yesterday from Secretary Loeb that only two horses should draw the vehicle containing the chief executive of the nation. And, Mr. Loeb stated, the carriage should be of the ordinary kind.

The instructions came just in time to cause the committee to decline the offer of a prominent and wealthy citizen of Colorado Springs who had tendered for the use of the president his own luxurious carriage and six almost coal-black steeds. He desired also to furnish his own coachmen and footmen. The equipage is probably the handsomest in the state, but the instructions from the president's secretary allowed of no m[illegible] on.

The president has been having a somewhat peculiar experience in St. Louis and Kansas City. In St. Louis the carriage of a private citizen was tendered to the president, but as the driver was not a member of the Hack Drivers union the executive committee of that organization waited upon the arrangements committee and stated that none of the union cabbies would drive if the coachman of the private carriage, who was not a member of the union, was allowed to continue. The committee made the change as requested.

In Kansas City, Friday, President Roosevelt rode in a union hack driven by a union cabby. It was intended to drive the president in a new landau owned by Mrs. K. B. Armour, which was tendered for that purpose. Mrs. Armour's coachman does not belong to the union. The union representatives waited on the carriage committee, stating that the members of the union would refuse to drive if the Armour carriage was used. The committee, as was done in St. Louis, acceded to the request.

The carriage committee of the Colorado Springs reception has had no matter of this nature laid before it and as H. S. Hayward, it is reported, will furnish the carriages, no question of this kind will arise, nor has it been even remotely discussed by those in charge of the reception.

[illegible] IN [illegible] FOR [illegible]

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

St. Louis, May 2.—Governor Peabody left for Denver this afternoon. Superintendent Duel of the Union Pacific wired that his special car will be at the disposal of the governor on his arrival at Denver and he will be taken at once by special train to Hugo to await the arrival of President Roosevelt on Monday morning and escort him into Denver.

The governor's staff left St. Louis tonight over the Wabash for Kansas City where their car will be attached to the Union Pacific train. The car will be switched off at Hugo Monday morning and it will probably be consolidated with the president's and governor's special in going to Denver. Governor Peabody will accompany the president throughout his journey in Colorado. The two men on Wednesday evening at the dinner given by ex-Governor Francis to President Roosevelt and Mr. Cleveland. Governor Peabody, General Bell and Colonels Hanford and McDonald were present at this function at the president's invitation. Governor Peabody was the only visiting governor to be so honored.

The governor, accompanied by Commissioners I. N. Stevens, Mrs. Ernest and Van E. Rouse went to the exposition grounds this morning to receive and dedicate for the second time a site for Colorado's building. The new plot is said to be well situated and satisfactory. The Colorado governor's reception at the Southern hotel is well commented upon in the local press this morning. In fact, the state of Colorado is now recognized as being at the exposition. It is almost impossible to find a visitor who has not some grievance against whoever had the dedication in charge. The St. Louis citizens say they are not to blame, the the World's fair people insisted on running the dedication by themselves and declined proffered assistance in handling the crowds and visitors.

PARIS MAGNIFICENT WITH [illegible]

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Paris, May 2.—Tonight the city was magnificent with radiant electric effects in honor of King Edward. The constant outlines of the opera house were traced in jeweled lines of light and the road by which the king proceeded to and from the opera was aflame from end to end. The sumptuous brilliancy of the Rue de la Paix culminated at the Place de L'Opera in an enormous crown made up of thousands of colored electric jewels, sparkling like diamonds, rubies, sapphires and emeralds.

Following the state dinner, at the Elysee palace, King Edward drove through the blazing, brilliantly lighted thoroughfares, continually acclaimed by the dense crowds which had gathered. The magnificent interior of the opera house was filled by an audience representative of the French capital. In the audience were officials of the navy, army, diplomatic corps in full regalia and the fairest women in France. The king occupied the royal box with Madame Loubet and the ministers and ambassadors. His majesty wore the black and gold uniform of a British admiral, and he appeared especially to enjoy the superb ballet presented.

reached a point of development when it possesses almost human intelligence, with some slight power of speech, and an ability to understand a few of the fundamental facts of life.

Perhaps to the general public there has been no feature of this convention that has been of such interest as the number of successful business and professional women that it has brought together; for, stripped of all the chiffons of flattery and poetry, and romance in which the matter has been shrouded for ages, the one burning desire of every woman's heart is for financial independence, and she looks to the woman who has solved the problem of owning an individual pocketbook as the female Moses who will point the way to the promised land wherein no woman will have to explain to husband or brother or father what she did with that quarter he gave her week before last.

I am not here to speak for the working woman. She can speak for herself. My plea is not for justice for her, but for the domestic woman—the woman who is the mainstay of the world, who is back of every great enterprise, and who makes possible the achievement of men—the woman behind the broom, who is the hardest worked and worst paid laborer on the face of the earth.

Not every woman has a call to preach the gospel; not every woman has a talent for law, or medicine, or writing; not every woman has a gift for finance, or desire to go out into the world to

A Practical and Progressive Trend

What has been discovered to be of vital importance in the home is equally so in regard to the educational institutions of the country. A practical and progressive trend of affairs is shown in the fact that the new Simmons college in Boston has taken into its plan the school of housekeeping so splendidly inaugurated by the Woman's Educational and Industrial Union of Boston.

If the many club women will closely follow out a plan for supervising the larger house-keeping much can be done for the school children that will be conducive to their health and happiness. Sanitation is a subject that appeals to every woman; fresh air, cleanliness in every particular. It is highly reprehensible not to have school houses kept in perfect sanitary condition, frequent cleansing after the best methods, is an imperative necessity. The water supply and the drinking cups should be especially looked after. Luncheon is served in some of the school houses. Of what does it consist?

The club women are paying considerable attention to this matter and it is having a very good effect. It is told of the janitor of one of the Boston schools, that he appeared much disturbed after a visit from a newly elected woman member of the board. Finally, he confidentially relieved his perturbed feelings to a sympathetic friend, saying, "What do you think, that woman wanted to see the basement of the school building, and I give you my word, it wasn't fit to be seen."

Proper food at proper times is of paramount importance, whether it is a pupil of the kindergarten, primary, grammar or High school, or the student in the university. Good work is an impossibility if there be failure to repair the waste of body. If systematic, intelligent care is a necessity in the kindergarten, how can it fail to be in the higher educational institutions that demand the most wearing application? Is not the food supply for young people of sufficient importance to warrant placing an expert on food in charge of the school and college kitchen? The laboratory from which work force must come daily to every individual?

Concerning Wedding Gifts

June, the month of weddings, is close upon us. The shops begin to show belief in the prophecy of the calendar, and advertise "Wedding Presents" in their most attractive way. While the silversmith and the makers of china and cut-glass are praising their tableware, it is worth while to remember that life, even for the newly married, is not wholly occupied with eating, says the Youth's Companion.

The parents of a bridegroom sixty years ago sent a handsome silver tea-service to the bride. It was resplendent among the gifts. The shape of the six pieces was not specially graceful, nor was the decoration beautiful, but the tea-set was "of the period." After two months of housekeeping, the young wife declared that it was too heavy and troublesome for constant use, and she packed it away. For forty years it was brought out at long intervals to be polished. Then came a wedding in the next generation, and the service was handed down to the new daughter-in-law. History repeated itself, and the second bride gave up the attempt to use the massive pieces. After storing them for twenty years, the family resolved to sacrifice sentiment to sense, and sold the [illegible] for old silver. Then they bought a picture with the money.

The tea service, too fine to use, may wall... [illegible] thousands of less valuable [illegible]. The thing which "makes a [illegible]" at the wedding is too often [illegible] afterward to some locked [illegible] safe-keeping.

[illegible] gift carries the thought, the sympathy, the loving study of the giver; it looms into the past and into the future; it commends itself to the happy [illegible] even more when twenty years [illegible] her from her wedding than on that first June day of high festival. In short, there can be no better present for a bridal gift than that the bride should say after a score of years, "I've used it every day, and it has worn well."

We believe that true religion speaks in actions more than in words, and manifests itself chiefly in the common [illegible] of life—in giving up the narrow [illegible] to God's authority, in inflexible uprightness, and truth, in active and [illegible] [illegible], in candor, judgment and in integrity, and [illegible] and [illegible].

Home Made Fashions

It is almost impossible to state definitely what should constitute a trousseau, as so many things need to be taken into consideration—one's financial condition, social position, both present and future, and whether or not one will travel, board or go to housekeeping. It is, however, not advisable to have an elaborate outlay of underwear, even though one's purse is deep, wide and well-filled. Styles change in underclothing, though not so frequently as in dresses, and an old-style corset cover is quite as unfashionable as an out-of-date jacket. If the bride-to-be is anything of a needlewoman, she will wish to embroider much of her trousseau. It being the fad at present to choose some favorite flower or design and work it in finest white floss on every piece of a set.

A set of underwear comprises two skirts: one long and much lace-trimmed to wear with thin, dainty gowns, having a deep under flounce with three tiny dust ruffles on the edge, and a shorter skirt, with one or two rows of insertion set in, a six-inch flounce of embroidery and reaching about to the ankles. The nightdress of nainsook or long cloth, to match the long skirt, is made with low, round neck, without an opening and insertion, as the recipes say, "to suit the taste." The same is true of chemise and drawers, but the corset cover is where all the skill, time and expense can be drawn to an admiring circle of intimates.

There should be at least six of each undergarment, except nightdresses and long skirts. If one does not have matched sets, four of those being sufficient for a year. One will need two suits of combination underwear, four lisle or silk vests, and a pair of silk-and-wool equestrian tights for raw, windy days. A silk petticoat is desirable, also a moreen and a black sateen one for rainy days.

Then one should have a bath robe, preferably of Turkish toweling, as the wool eiderdown is very warm, both a long and short kimona and three or four dainty dressing jackets, one in challie, one in dimity, one of eiderdown (to wear in the seclusion of one's own room—never at the table), and one of lawn or batiste. A short skirt of pretty, fine flannel trimmed with dainty colors of wash ribbon will be a summer necessity.

Some aprons should form a part of every outfit—substantial gingham all-enveloping ones, with several pockets, for cleaning days, and one or two gossamer affairs to "dress up" in to sew or serve luncheon.—Betty Stacey in the Pilgrim for May.

Lace Very Fashionable.

It is lace, lace everywhere in the best gowns and the coats and the hats, for that matter, too. There are entire lace gowns in princess design, which are voile and eolienne gowns are made up over underskirts of chiffon as well as silk and a number of the imported models show the lace embroidered in silk threads, matching in color the chiffon petticoat, which shows through the meshes of the lace. The crepe de chine, voile and eolienne gowns are made up effectively with lace. Some of the prettiest show the lace introduced as a stole panel in the front of the skirt, which grows wider as it nears the hem, and others display the lace merely as separate motifs, says a metropolitan fashion writer.

Still another very new idea for sheer, filmy frocks is to have the soft full skirt garlanded with floral lace motifs connected with trailing vines in silk embroidery. For these costumes chalk white is a favorite color. It is quite the mode in these sheer veiling frocks to have the skirt accordion plaited and the lace decoration introduced only on the bodice. A dainty voile gown in silver gray is made with an accordion plaited skirt and a blouse bodice which shows a yoke of finely tucked white mousseline de soie fastened with tiny white silk buttons. To emphasize the long shoulder effect a bertha was introduced made of point Venise lace, bound with silver gray moire silk and threaded with narrow black velvet ribbons. The sleeves were quite the latest mode, reaching just to the elbow with lace trimmed frills falling over it. Silk mitts were worn with the costume, and the girdle added another new touch. It was of the same tint of gray as the gown, but made of soft louisine silk and in shape and depth was a most pronounced girdle. The new tendency is toward the deep pointed girdle.

the woman who might otherwise make a living by her pencil or brush or needle, and the managers of every woman's exchange in the country will tell you that their greatest difficulty is in keeping out the work of the women who do not need to sell their work, but who only do it in order to earn a little money of their own.

The avenues of public employment open to women are not so inviting, nor is the pay in them so great that ordinary women would be unduly tempted to enter them, and that so many women who apparently do not need to go out of their own homes for a support are crowding into every profession and business that offers a prospect of a livelihood can only be explained by the fact that the woman with the broom is getting tired of working for her board and clothes. She want wages. When men grow just enough to abandon the idea that keeping house and doing the family sewing and rearing children is a snap and not a profession; when they grow broad enough to realize that the woman with the broom is a laborer just as much worthy of her hire as a typewriter, we shall have fewer women yearning to go out into the world and earn a few dollars of spending money instead of having their car fare doled out to them, and the privilege of running a bill.—(Extracts from an address delivered at the National Suffrage convention in New Orleans, by Mrs. Elizabeth B. Power of Song

Thirty men, red-eyed and disheveled, lined up before a judge of the San Francisco police court. It was the regular morning company of "drunks and disorderlies." Some were old and hardened, others hung their heads in shame. Just as the momentary disorder attending the bringing in of the prisoners quieted down, a strange thing happened. A strong, clear voice from below began singing:

"Last night I lay a-sleeping,
There came a dream so fair."

Last night! It had been for them all a nightmare or a drunken stupor. The song was such a contrast to the horrible fact that no one could fail of a sudden shock at the thought the song suggested.

"I stood in old Jerusalem,
Beside the Temple there."

The song went on. The judge had paused. He made a quiet inquiry. A former member of a famous opera company, known all over the country, was awaiting trial for forgery. It was he who was singing in his cell.

Meantime the song went on, and every man in the line showed emotion. One or two dropped on their knees; one boy at the end of the line, after a desperate effort at self-control, leaned against the wall, buried his face against his folded arms, and sobbed, "O mother, mother!"

The sobs, cutting to the very heart the men who heard, and the song, still welling its way through the court room, blended in the hush. At length one man protested.

"Judge," said he, "have we got to submit to this? We're here to take our punishment, but this—" He, too, began to sob.

It was impossible to proceed with the business of the court, yet the judge gave no order to stop the song. The police sergeant, after a surprised effort to keep the men in line, stepped back and waited with the rest. The song moved on to its climax:

"Jerusalem, Jerusalem! Sing, for the night is o'er!
Hosanna in the highest! hosanna, for evermore!"

In an ecstasy of melody the last words rang out, and then there was silence.

The judge looked into the faces of the men before him. There was no one who was not touched by the song; not one in whom some better impulse was not stirred. He did not call the cases singly—a kind word of advice, and he dismissed them all. No man was fined or sentenced to the workhouse that morning. The song had done more good than punishment could have accomplished.—(Youth's Companion.

Rank is money obligation, but it also brings a certain freedom from restrictions that bind the humble. A man of literary aspirations who had his way yet to make in the world wrote a poem, which he submitted to his wife before sending it out for publication.

"Why, Harry," she said, on looking it over, "you have made 'hundred' rhyme with 'onward.'"

"That's all right," he replied. "Tennyson did it."

"Yes," rejoined his wife. "Tennyson could do such a thing, but you can't, Henry."—(Youth's Companion.

For the Little Folks

How to Be Sunny.

I KNOW a little lady
Who, be it bright or shady,
Laughs and sings, and sings, and laughs,
In such a merry way,
That on a day made shady
By dark, gray clouds, my lady
Laughed till birds flew out to sing,
And the clouds all flew away.

Dilly-Dally.

Dilly-Dally was almost seven years old. See if you can guess how he came to have such a funny name.

"O, Dilly-Dally! Where are you, dear? Run quick with this pail to the grocer's and get this full of molasses, and don't spill a bit. I want it for—well, no matter. I want it."

The molasses was for molasses candy. His mother had just remembered that it was his birthday.

Dilly took it, and ran out of the door. He was always quick enough at starting. His trouble came afterward. In the hedge by the garden gate he spied a yellow-breast, and heard a sweet note that made him stop and see what the leaves hid. That took a minute.

"Oh, I must hurry!" he said, and started again; but this time Mr. Toad hopped out in a friendly way to make him linger.

It was almost dark when he came in sight of home.

"O, Dilly-Dally," said his mother, "where have you been all this time? It was your party, and all the little boys and girls I sent for had to go home. It grew so late I had to cut the cake and give them all a piece, and there wasn't anybody to play games or anything. It was too bad!"

Wasn't it? Dilly thought so. A boy's birthday party without any boy to it!

"O, Dilly-Dally," said his mother, sorrowfully, "why don't you earn a better name?"

Dilly-Dally says he is going to. How do you suppose he is going to do it?—(Sunbeam.

A Wise Little Thistle.

Once upon a time a thistle blossomed in a lane. She had downy, beautiful, purple blossoms, but no sharp spines, and the rabbits and the goats came down the lane and nibbled at the fat, juicy leaves. The poor thistle felt bad that she should look so ragged, when the sunshine was so bright. But what could she do? Her leaves were so sweet and juicy, and the rabbits like to eat them, and they never thought about her. If they kept on, they would eat her all up. So she thought and thought about it all night, and in the morning she raised her head and looked happy. She had a plan.

One day a pretty gray bunny came hopping down the lane, and the thistle looked very inviting. Indeed, she wanted him to nibble at the lower leaf to see how her plan worked. On came bunny and did just what the thistle wanted him to. He put out his little pink nose to take a bite from the end of the nice, big, green leaf. But ugh! he didn't bite it, because something pricked him on his pretty little pink nose. He looked at the thistle very reproachfully and hopped away.

The thistle nodded her purple blossoms with delight. Yes, her plan worked. She would tell the other thistles. So she sent a soft, silken own messenger to tell her next door neighbor about it, and to advise her to grow a little spine on the end of the juicy leaf.

But one day a goat came down the lane, and the thistle looked very unconcerned, for she felt perfectly secure now, with her beautiful sharp spine. The goat came up and opened his mouth to take a bite, but he didn't take the bite, for the spine pricked his tongue. He looked very much surprised, for he had never heard of such a thing as a thistle with a pricker!

The thistle was delighted; she need never fear the rabbits or goats again. But she smiled too soon, for when the goat had got over his surprise, he walked around and took a bite out of the side of the leaf where there was no spine. Then it was the thistle's turn to be surprised, and after the goat had gone on to eat grass, she fell to thinking again. The spine protected the end of her leaf, but not the side. Evidently she would have to grow some more spines.

So she sent some more thistle-down messengers to her neighbors to tell them that one spine was not enough—they must protect the edges as well as the ends. And so the thistles learned to cover their leaves with spines to keep them from being bitten off.—(New York Tribune.

[illegible] OPPORTUNITY

[illegible] actions and [illegible] on. [illegible] and the [illegible] of [illegible] who [illegible] the first to fly an [illegible] found in the Black [illegible] the stock market [illegible] the [illegible] of last [illegible], whither

[illegible] like a prime [illegible] the [illegible] Dutch Dan [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] and the world [illegible] many a [illegible]

[illegible] stock operation utterly without financial fear. And [illegible] further. In a [illegible] they would have cut the [illegible] in pieces and [illegible] his [illegible] on a platter around [illegible] sentury they were fain to content [illegible] with endeavoring to devise him of the [illegible] millions to do which they wilted their smiles [illegible] or seven or eight of them [illegible].

This [illegible] was divided into ten properties, and one after another burled at the little man with the [illegible] and the high forehead. The little man [illegible] the first and the second and the third, but the fourth broke his leg and the fifth knocked the wind out of him. The Street cheered, and bowed its confidence in the artillery by going short of the Greener stock.

Just before the sixth shot Greener [illegible] to his [illegible] old [illegible] man with the skin-flinty [illegible] and thirty millions in cash. A [illegible] rampart man-high, of government bonds was raised about the Pyrenaic Napoleon, and the financial cannoneers ceased firing precious projectiles. The new fortifications were impregnable and they knew it, so they contented themselves with gathering up their own shot and a small railroad or two dropped by Greener in his haste to seek shelter. Then Sharpe went to England to win the Derby and Dittenhoeffer went to Long Branch to amuse himself playing a no-limit faro game [illegible] of [illegible] Vanities were [illegible] which there was [illegible] on the part of the bank[illegible] to pick up the [illegible] and Greener [illegible] overboard the [illegible] part of his load. Greener had [illegible] innumerable widows and orphans. His railroad-wrecking schemes. The moneylenders should avenge the widows and orphans. It was a good deed. Their was not a doubt of it in their minds.

Federal Telegraph, in which Greener's commitments were heaviest, had been slowly sinking. Successful in other quarters of the market, Dutch Dan decided to "whack the everlasting daylights out of Fed. Tel." He went about it calmly, just as he played roulette—selling it methodically, ceaselessly, doggedly. And the price wilted. Greener, unsuccessful in other quarters of the Street, decided it was time to do something to save himself. He needed only $5,000,000. At a pinch $3,500,000 might do; or, for the moment, even $2,500,000. But he must have the money at once. Delay meant danger, and danger meant Dittenhoeffer, and Dittenhoeffer might mean death.

Of a sudden, rising from nowhere, fathered by no one, the rumor whirled about the Street that Greener was in difficulties. Financial ghouls ran to the banks and interviewed the presidents. They asked no questions in order to get no lies. They simply said as though they knew: "Greener is on his uppers."

The bank presidents smiled indulgently, almost pitingly. "Oh, you've just heard it, have you? We've known it for six weeks."

Back to the Stock exchange rushed the ghouls to sell the Greener stocks—not Federal Telegraph, which was really

"Would you execute an order from me?"

"Certainly, Mr. Greener. I'll execute anybody's orders. I'm a broker."

"Very well. Sell 50,000 shares of Federal Telegraph common at the [illegible]"

"What price?" jotting down the figures from force of habit, his mind being paralyzed.

"The best you can get." The quack snapping at the rapids [illegible]

"Very well."

The two men looked at one another, Dutch Dan half menacingly, Greener calmly, steadily, his furtive eyes almost truthful.

"Good morning," said Dittenhoeffer at length, and the little [illegible] high-browed head nodded dismissingly.

Dittenhoeffer hastened back to the exchange. At the entrance he met his partner, Bill [illegible]—the "Co." of D. Dittenhoeffer & Co.

"Bill, I've just got an order from Greener to sell 50,000 shares of Federal Telegraph."

"Wh-what?" gasped Smith.

"Greener sent for me, asked me whether I'd accept an order from him. I said yes, and he told me to sell 50,000 shares of Telegraph, and I'm—"

"You've got him, Dan! You've got him," exultantly.

"I'm going to cover my 20,000 shares with the first half of the order and sell the rest the best I can."

"Man alive, this is your chance! Don't you see you've got him? [illegible] of the Eastern National bank tells me there isn't a bank in the city will lend Greener money, and he needs it badly to pay the last $10,000,000 to the Indian Pacific bondholders. He's bit off more than he can chew, [illegible]"

"Well, Bill, we'll treat Mr. Greener as we do any other customer," said Dittenhoeffer.

"But," began Smith with [illegible] consternation; he was an honest man when away from the Street.

"Oh, I'll get him yet. This won't save him. I'll get him yet," with a confident smile.

It would have been very easy for him to take advantage of Greener's order to make a fortune. He was short 20,000 shares which he had put out at an average price of [illegible]. He could have thrown Greener's block of 50,000 shares, hurled it bodily at the market. Not even a gilt-edge stock could withstand the impact of such a fearful blow, and the price of Federal Telegraph doubtless would have broken 15 points or more, and he could easily have taken in his shorts at 75 or possibly even at 70, which would have meant a profit of a half million of dollars and a loss of a much-needed million to his arch-foe, Greener. And if he allowed his partner to whisper in strict confidence to some friend that Dan was selling out a big line of Telegraph for Greener, the "Room" would have gone wild, and everybody would have hastened to sell, and the decline would have gone so much further as to cripple the little Napoleon possibly beyond all hope of recovery. Had Greener made the most colossal mistake in his life in giving the order to his enemy?

Dan went to the Federal Telegraph post, where a score of madmen were shouting at the top of their voices the prices they were willing to pay or accept for varying amounts of the stock. He gave to 20 brokers orders to sell 1,000 shares each at the best obtainable price, and he himself, through another man, took an equal amount. On the next day he in person sold 20,000 shares, and on the third day the last 10,000 shares of Greener's order. This selling, the Street thought, was for his own account. It was a short stock that his colleagues thought he was selling stock he didn't own, trusting later on to buy it back cheaply. Such selling never hurt the depressing effect of "long" stock because it is obvious that the short seller must sooner or later buy the stock in, insuring a future demand, which would exert a lifting influence on prices for

He who sells what isn't his'n
Must buy it back or go to prison.

And Dittenhoeffer was able to get an average of 8[illegible] per share for Greener's 50,000 shares of Federal Telegraph company stock, for the Street agreed, with many head shakings, that Dan was becoming too reckless and Greener was a slippery little cuss, and the short interest must be simply enormous and the danger of [illegible] "squeeze" exceedingly great. Wherefore, they forebore to "whack" Telegraph. Indeed, many shrewd traders saw in the seeming weakness of the stock a trap of the wily little Napoleon and they "fooled" him by astutely buying Federal Telegraph.

With the $4,000,000 which he received from the sale of the big block of stock Greener overcame his other troubles and carried out all his plans. It was a daring stroke to trust to a stock broker's professional honor. It worked in the owner of a great railroad system. Dutch Dan's attacks later did absolutely no harm. Greener had made an opportunity and Dittenhoeffer had lost one.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTE.

Mr. John Hammer, of Stockholm, Sweden, managing director of the General Export association of Sweden, will represent the exposition as special commissioner in that country and Norway.

Dr. Frank Baker, superintendent of the National Zoological park at Washington, D. C., was a visitor this week, conferring with President Francis, Director of Exhibits Skiff, and Director of Works Taylor in regard to the aviary which the government will exhibit at the World's fair. A big bird cage 200x50 feet with a height of 52 feet is to be built in a portion of the grounds well wooded and otherwise adapted to such an exhibition, the desire being to show the birds with natural surroundings. There will be about 1,000 birds in all, collected from all parts of the world. About one-third of the cage, which is to have a dome top, will be devoted to aquatic birds and the rest of the sky to singing and plumage birds. Each of the sections will have trees and a running stream. The wire of the cage will be so fine as to be invisible to the eye at some distance away. A track for visitors will run through the cage, enabling them to see the birds to better advantage. This will be the first display of the kind ever made at an international exposition.

Mr. E. M. Dawson, chief clerk of the state department and member of the government board, conferred with Mr. Taylor, director of works, and Mr. Skiff, director of exhibits, on April 18, concerning the displays to be made by Alaska and Indian territory. Both territories will make exhibits in the large exhibit buildings, and each will also have a building, located probably west of the Agricultural building. Alaska and Indian territory will each have $50,000 to spend on its display.

Miss Annie S. Peck, the celebrated mountain climber and lecturer, desires to represent the exposition in her proposed ascent of Mt. Sorata in Bolivia. Miss Peck is a graduate of the State University of Michigan, has been a teacher of Latin at Purdue university and Smith college, and was the first woman to study at the American School of Archaeology in Athens. She has lectured before the leading geographical and archaeological societies of many countries and has climbed some of the highest peaks of the world. She writes as follows from Boston, Mass.:

"At the suggestion of Mr. George Gruitham [illegible] I write to you in regard to my expedition to South America. I propose to climb Mt. Sorata in Bolivia, 25,000 feet high. It would be the loftiest height yet reached on the surface of the earth, breaking the world's record in mountain climbing. The summit has never yet been reached though attempted by Sir Martin Conway. Those who know me feel certain of my success, as I have never yet failed in anything I have undertaken. I shall be accompanied by three Swiss guides, one of whom was with Conway, and a scientific man. President W. G. Tight of the University of New Mexico, who has agreed to accompany me. He was recommended by the geological survey in Washington as the best possible man for the expedition, as all around scientific man and an expert photographer. I propose to make observations geographical, geological and meteorological; to take barometers, thermometers and other scientific instruments, cameras, special equipment, tents, rifles, provisions, to experiment with bags of oxygen and Japanese stoves, etc. I shall have extraordinary shoes with three thicknesses of leather over the instep, wear three pairs of stockings on the four ways a guide [illegible] feet so they turn at black [illegible] a little less protection. But I expect the oxygen to help me. I shall also make an investigation on Mt. C[illegible] (20,000 feet) as advised by Prof. Bingham of Harvard, where are said to be remains from before the time of the Incas and visit [illegible] city not far from Lima, besides studying the manners and customs of the natives. Indians, from which I can procure many interesting things. I have the promise of [illegible] skins, blankets, [illegible] mats, etc., instruments, models of boats, costumes, [illegible] and curiosities for spinning and many other things."

Darwin W. Mummao [illegible] state officials while at Jefferson City recently, and conferred with the state superintendent of public schools about a plan for bringing large bodies of Missouri school children to the World's fair. D. R. Wolfe, prominent Sunday school worker, and W. B. [illegible] of the Colonial Trust company are co-operating with him in a plan to get for acres of ground for the erection of buildings in which large bodies of children can be cared for at the fair after being brought in in personally conducted trains.

Strange Contest.

A poultry event of international importance and one which has attracted a great deal of interest is an international laying contest between hens from the United States and others from Australia. Last year Australian poultrymen arranged a contest, to be carried on at the agricultural experiment station conducted by the government of New South Wales. A report of the result was sent to Mr. Miller Purvis, editor of Commercial Poultry, who published it, adding a sarcastic remark about the low record made. This remark coming to the notice of Mr. A. A. Dunn, the honorable secretary of the committee having the contest in charge, he at once issued through Commercial Poultry a challenge to American breeders to send three pens of six females and one male to Sydney, to enter a contest to extend over one year from April 1, 1903, agreeing for his government to pay transportation charges from San Francisco, and naming the Petaluma Incubator company as its agent to take charge of and forward the fowls, if any were placed in the competition. Mr. Purvis agreed to take the matter up if any pens were offered, and within a week after the offer was made public more than 20 American breeders were on record as accepting the challenge. It was decided to select the three pens by lot and W. R. Candee, Fayetteville, N. Y., W. K. Hays, Henleyville, Calif., and Mrs. A. F. Hansell, Loup City, Neb., were the lucky ones chosen to send pens to the great contest. Mrs. Hansell entered Single Comb Brown Leghorns and the other two contestants offered White Wyandottes.

Arrangements were made to forward the birds by Steamship Sierra, which sailed from San Francisco February 12, having been delayed three days. The birds arrived at San Francisco in good shape and were on exhibition at the offices of the Petaluma Incubator company for several days. They were placed in comfortable coops, canvas covered by the Petaluma Incubator company and started on their journey, the proper person was given a liberal fee to see that they had the best care. By this time they are on the other side of the world, and being prepared for the contest. Word comes from Sydney that great interest is felt in that country in the contest.

If the American birds win the owners of them will make a very profitable thing out of it, and American poultrymen in general will reap great benefit from the demand for poultry from Australia.—(Kansas City Journal).

[illegible] should go, when they were in the right, to get the [illegible] and [illegible] wife in the wrong to overcome [illegible] by the brute force of dollars. It was natural that in their opinion [illegible] in the market the two men [illegible] be as dissimilar as they [illegible] [illegible] Machiavelli and Richard Coeur de Lion.

[illegible] knew exactly how the enmity [illegible] Greener and Dittenhoeffer began. The "Little Napoleon of Wall Street" felt toward Dutch Dan a certain [illegible] for interference [illegible] stock market coups. But [illegible] Greener madly, probably for [illegible] that a hawk hates a [illegible] instinctive antipathy of the [illegible]

[illegible] had tried to "bust" [illegible] grown richer [illegible] the growth of his fortune [illegible] to the conquest [illegible] Sam Sharpe had [illegible] with [illegible] to show the estate [illegible] has to [illegible] the Greener [illegible] the finances [illegible] the privilege of that cost him on an average $10,000 a night for a month.

There was a period of peace in Wall Street following the last encounter between the diminutive Napoleon and Dutch Dan. But after a few months the fight resumed. Greener was desirous of "bulling" his stocks generally and his pet, Federal Telegraph company, particularly. Just to show there was no need to hurry the "bull" or upward movement, Dan sold the stock "short" every time Greener tried to advance the price. Four times did Greener try, and four times Dittenhoeffer sold him a few thousand shares—just enough to check the advance. Up to a certain point a manipulator of stocks is successful. His manipulation may comprise many ingenious and complex actions and devices, but the elemental fact in bull manipulation is to buy more than the other fellow can or wishes to sell. Greener was willing to buy, but Dan was even more willing to sell.

Greener really was in desperate straits. He was committed to many important enterprises. To carry them out he needed cash and the banks, fearing a good property, but his reorganized roads, whose renascence was so recent that they had not grown into full strength. Down went prices and up went the whisper, "Dittenhoeffer's got Greener at last!"

A thousand brokers rushed to find their dear friend Dan to congratulate him—Napoleon's conqueror, the hero of the hour, the future dispenser of liberal commissions. But dear Dan could not be found. He was not on the "floor" of the exchange nor at his office.

Someone had sought Dittenhoeffer before the brokers thought of congratulating him—some one who was the greatest gambler of all, greater even than Dutch Dan—a little man with furtive brown eyes and a squeaky voice, also a wonderful forehead—Mr. John F. Greener.

"Mr. Dittenhoeffer, I sent for you to ask you a question," he squeaked calmly. He stood beside a garrulous ticker.

"Certainly, Mr. Greener." And Dittenhoeffer instantly had a vision of humble requests to "let up." And he almost formulated the words of a withering refusal.

McCutcheon's Drawings.

Mr. George Ade, who seems to be writing fables with one hand and comic [illegible] with the other, has paused long enough to supply a very satisfactory introduction for his friend, McCutcheon's [illegible] collection of drawings, which is to be brought out in May. He points out [illegible] merits of this artist's work so capitally that his words are well worth quoting. [illegible] says: "Those who have studied and [illegible] Mr. McCutcheon's cartoons in the daily [illegible] have been favorably [illegible] by the two eminent characteristics [illegible] First, he cartoons public men without grossly insulting them. Second, he recognizes the very large and important fact that political events do not fill the entire hearts of the American people. In Mr. McCutcheon's cartoon, we admire the [illegible] and the gentle humor which diffuses all of his work, but I [illegible] say that more than all we admire him for his considerate treatment of [illegible] men and his blessed wisdom in [illegible] away from the hackneyed [illegible] subjects and giving us a few pictures of that everyday life which is [illegible] interest." Two Stories.

The Smart Set Publishing company of New York is about to issue an [illegible] on reincarnation, entitled "[illegible] the Faker," by Edward S. [illegible]

The story is a most original one [illegible] who, having spent 50 years in [illegible] has returned to this country and [illegible] is an alarming as well as an amusing manner. The illustrations are from drawings by Hy. Mayer.

Also a story entitled "A Puritan Witch," by Marvin Dana.

This romance deals with witchcraft in the Puritan days of New England and abounds in [illegible] action and sentiment. The movement is rapid, the feeling is [illegible] the characters are alive, the plot [illegible] and distinctive, while the [illegible] of the work is admirable. [illegible] the novel is one of [illegible] interest and merits an unusual success. The illustrations are from drawings by F. R. Audibert, in photogravure.

How Helen Keller Writes.

Not one person in 10,000 of those who will read "The Story of My Life," by Helen Keller, just published by Doubleday, Page & Co., will have the least [illegible] of the amount of hard work [illegible] to write the story. First of all, Miss Keller puts down her ideas "in Braille," as the blind express it; that is to say in the system of "points" raised on paper by means of a stylus and slate devised to aid the blind; these [illegible] being read afterward by passing the sensitive fingers over them. When all of this Braille work has been completed Miss Keller goes to her typewriter and uses these notes as a guide to the rewriting of the story.

As soon as a page of matter is typewritten, it is [illegible] Keller, who [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] to her [illegible] [illegible] have to be [illegible] and before Miss Keller is [illegible] when the [illegible] are [illegible] to her, all this [illegible] word after word that Miss Keller writes [illegible] through her [illegible] at that five [illegible] It will be a [illegible] to everybody to know that the first [illegible] to be one of the most successful [illegible] writings of the year, and Miss Keller is likely to reap substantial rewards for the extraordinary ability and patience which she has shown in [illegible] work.

[illegible] for the Rhodes Scholarships.

[illegible] collegiate training at Oxford, England, is the opportunity of at least two young men in every state and territory of the union. The provision of [illegible] scholarships for American youths was made under the will of the late Cecil Rhodes, the South Africa "Diamond King." During the past three [illegible] Mr. George R. Parkin, representing the Oxford trustees, has been endeavoring to settle upon a method of selection with the leading educational men of the United States. It is probable that the nominations will be made by state committees selected for that purpose. In some states, appointments will be made in rotation by the leading colleges; in others, candidates will be chosen directly from secondary schools. It is expected that the first scholars will be selected before the end of the year; these will enter on residence at Oxford some time during the latter part of 1904. The age limit is 21 at entering Oxford, and the candidate must be a citizen or a son of a citizen of the United States, and unmarried. All expenses of the Rhodes scholarship students are defrayed by the executors of the South African "Pathfinder's" will.—(Collier's Weekly.

Chaucer's Youth.

Ethel A. Pennell's sketch, "In Chaucer's Youth," in the May St. Nicholas, is [illegible] up on unfamiliar historic fact. Chaucer, writer of verse, is well known to every school girl and boy; but not every grown-up, even of fair general information, knows that the lad Geoffrey Chaucer was a favorite page in the court of King Edward III, and later a squire to Prince Lionel. "In Chaucer's Youth" tells the pretty story of the ready wit and quick courage which advanced young Geoffrey Chaucer from lady's page to prince's squire.

White's Reminiscences.

Andrew D. White, who has been resting quietly in Italy since his release from the cares of the German embassy at Berlin, has just sent to the Century Magazine the first part of a manuscript upon which he has long been engaged, consisting of reminiscences of his diplomatic life. The present part covers his recollections of Beaconsfield, the Emperors William I and Frederick, Bismarck, Browning, and other famous European statesmen and writers. Further papers will include recollections of his recent embassy to Berlin.

Dr. White, who is a graduate of the famous Yale class of '53, has filled many diplomatic positions, beginning with an attacheship of the United States legation in St. Petersburg when he was a very young man. He was special commissioner to Santo Domingo in 1871, commissioner to the Paris exposition of 1878, minister to Germany, 1879-81 (his first mission to Germany), minister to Russia, 1892-94, member of the Venezuelan commission of 1896-97, member of the Peace commission at The Hague, and ambassador to Germany (his second mission) from 1897 until his recent resignation and retirement.

The recollections of such a life are sure to be of very great interest. The papers will begin to appear in an early number of the Century.

"A Voice in the Desert."

"A Voice in the Desert," is an interesting story but not a pleasant one to read. In some ways it is a stormy story. The description of our American desert is sympathetically done and its charms are set forth in such a way as might attract the most skeptical.

The story lacks humor to relieve its somber tone, even the characters whom we are supposed to consider light and gay by nature have, through their environment, taken on the same somber tone. It's a girl, ellan story. One might say the [illegible] trend is American rather than French. It is really delightfully American all the way through. Its author is Pauline Bradford [illegible] and is published by McClure, Phillips & Co.

The Author of Journeys End.

Justus Miles Forman, the author of "Journeys End," that charming love story with an end as puzzling as Stockton's "Lady or the Tiger," was born at Le Roy, N. Y., in the heart of the Genesee valley, in 18[illegible].

When he had finished his course at Yale he went abroad to study art and absorbed unconsciously the spirit of European life and the character of the European people. When he came back to America he varied his artistic work with writing, and he has been so successful with his stories that they occupy most of his time. "Journeys End" is his second novel. The first he is preparing with George W. Broadhurst for the stage for Aubrey Boucicault. But he keeps at his sketching and painting. Perhaps it is not unlikely that there will soon be a novel by Mr. Forman, illustrated by its author and dramatized by the author, so varied are his talents.

The Golden Fleece.

By David Graham Phillips. Published by McClure, Phillips & Co., New York.

The hero of this story, if he may be so called, is an English earl who sees financial failure and loss of his estates staring him in the face with the alternatives of going out to earn his daily bread, which is quite an impossibility, or of sailing to America, where, he understands, heiresses are plentiful and ready to grasp at such a chance as the Earl of Frothingham could offer.

From the beginning to the end of his visit to America, the earl is never allowed to be bored by himself, which would seem an easy possibility.

The incidents rush upon each other so vigorously that he has hardly time to take a breath, in marked contrast to his accustomed English fashion of taking his time about everything.

The reader finds the book on this account always interesting. The earl lands in New York where he meets the typical New York girl, and thinks he will find the conquest easy. From there he goes successively to Boston, Washington and Chicago where he meets fashionable young ladies and hastens to condescend to woo them. Considering the fact that he left his heart behind him with a "comfortable" English girl, he takes up this wooing for commercial reasons very seriously. After some six weeks of this pace with many an incident that has been an eye opener, he goes home with a sincere liking for America and with quite a different opinion of America's citizens from that he had gained with Americans who lived abroad.

The story is a good clean one of fashionable life, and gives an amusing picture of its vanities and weaknesses. The conversations are bright and cheerful. The characters are well drawn and stand out clearly before the reader.

The Under Dog.

The Scribners announce a new book by F. Hopkinson Smith for May. It consists of 12 stories and its title will be "The Under Dog." The book will be illustrated.

If the sympathies of the public are always with "the under dog," the portraits, pathetic and tender, and the incidents, tragic and humorous, which form the substance of these stories will interest a wide circle of readers. Most of them are tales of men and women who have been misunderstood, and in the fashioning of them the author's extraordinary sense of the dramatic and picturesque is united with an idealised justice and with a seriousness of purpose which lifts the book to a high plane.

Fairy Tales.

L. Frank Baum has written and published more books of fairy tales than any other author of ancient or modern times and, especially in America, his name is known in every household where there are children old enough to read or to be read to. It is rather surprising that an American, and a Chicago man at that, should hold the world's fairy tale record, but it is nevertheless true. Mr. Baum's new book for this year is announced by his publishers, the Bobbs-Merrill company, under the attractive title of "The Enchanted Island of Yew." It is said to contain even more novel ideas than the author's famous "Wizard of Oz."

Worth $12.50 a Minute.

Simeon Ford is to address the Booksellers association in New York city, and feels himself unusually well qualified to talk about the bookseller's duties, now that he is about to publish a book himself.

He has often been urged to put his speeches into book form, but has refused until this season. Possibly, in time he may come around to accepting another proposition, with which he had considerable fun some time ago.

The enterprising manager of a vaudeville show offered him $1,500 to talk for ten minutes, twice a day, upon the stage, and Mr. Ford admitted that the proposition was alluring.

"It figures up $12.50 a minute," he said, thoughtfully. "The hotel business doesn't pay me $12.50 a minute. At least, there are some minutes when I don't make that."

However, he resisted the temptation. Mr. Ford's book is to be called "A Few Remarks," and will be published by Doubleday, Page & Co.

Book of Our Northern Shrubs.

Miss Keeler's "Our Northern Shrubs," which the Scribners have just published, is, in brief, a complete enumeration and description of those shrubs which find their most congenial home in the region extending from the Atlantic ocean to the Mississippi river, and from Canada to the northern boundary of our southern states.

The volume is prepared not only for the amateur botanist who seeks a more complete description of plants than the text-books in common use afford; not only for the lover of nature who desires a personal acquaintance with the shrubs that grow in the fields and [illegible] but also to serve those [illegible] are engaged in the establishment and [illegible] of city parks, boulevards and roadways, who are seeking [illegible] country roadsides and [illegible] railway stations, as [illegible] in the decoration of [illegible] would gladly [illegible] native shrubs were their habits [illegible] better understood.

THE STRIPED CHEST

He had knelt down in front of the striped chest, and passed the blade of the tool under the lid. With a sharp snick the lock flew back.

"Stand by!" yelled the mate, and with a heave he threw back the massive top of the box. As it swung up, we all three sprang back, I with my pistol leveled, and the carpenter with the hammer above his head. Then, as nothing happened, we each took a step forward and peeped in. The box was empty.

Not quite empty, either, for in one corner was lying an old yellow candlestick, elaborately engraved, which appeared to be as old as the box itself. Its rich, yellow tone and artistic shape suggested that it was an object of value.

"Well, I'm blessed!" cried Allardyce, staring blankly into it. "Where does the weight come in, then?"

"Look at the thickness of the sides and look at the lid. Why, it's five inches through, and see that great metal spring across it."

"That's for holding the lid up," said the mate. "You see, it won't lean back. What's that German printing on the inside?"

"It means that it was made by Johann Rothstein of Augsburg, in 16[illegible]."

"And a solid bit of work, too. But it doesn't throw much light on what has passed, does it, Captain Barclay? That candlestick looks like gold. We shall have something for our trouble after all."

He leaned forward to grasp it, and from that moment I have never doubted as to the reality of inspiration, for on the instant I caught him by the collar and pulled him straight again. It may have been some story of the middle ages which I had read, or it may have been some [illegible] that my eye has [illegible] red which was not part of the lock, but to him and to me it will always seem an inspiration, so prompt and sudden was my action.

"There's devilry here," said I. "Give me the crooked stick from the corner."

It was an ordinary walking cane with a hooked top. I passed it over the candlestick and gave it a pull. With a flash a row of polished steel fangs shot out from below the upper lid, and the great striped chest snapped at us like a wild animal. Clang came the huge lid into its place, and the glasses on the swinging rack sang and tinkled with the shock. The mate sat down on the edge of the table and shivered like a frightened horse.

"You've saved my life, Captain Barclay!" said he.

So this was the secret of the striped treasure chest of old Don Ramirez di Leyra, and this was how he preserved his ill-gotten gains from Terra Firma and the Province of Veraquas. Be the thief ever so cunning he could not tell that golden candlestick from the other articles of value, and the instant that he laid hands upon it the terrible spring was loosed and the murderous steel spikes were driven into his brain, while the shock of the blow sent the victim backwards and enabled the chest automatically to close itself. How many, I wondered, had fallen victims to the ingenuity of the mechanic of Augsburg. And as I thought of the possible history of that grim striped chest, my resolution was very quickly taken.

"Carpenter, bring three men and carry this on deck."

"Going to throw it overboard, sir?"

"Yes, Mr. Allardyce. I'm not superstitious as a rule, but there are some things which are more than a sailor can be called upon to stand."

So we did not even wait for the three sailors, but we carried it out, the mate, the carpenter and I, and we pushed it with our own hands over the bulwarks. There was a white spout of water, and it was gone.

There it lies, the striped chest, a thousand fathoms deep, and if, as they say, the sea will some day be dry land, I grieve for the man who finds that old box and tries to penetrate into its secret.

River Improvement at St. Louis.

Nearly $1,000,000 will be spent in narrowing and deepening the channel of the Mississippi river along almost the entire river front of the city by authority of the war department, which has approved the appropriation made by congress for the work. About 100 acres will be added to the wharf by filling in, the width of the improvement varying [illegible] The middle of the channel is to be dredged, and when the entire work is completed it will enable the largest of the river boats to land freight at any point along the wharf.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

IMPROVED ORE PROCESS

[illegible] Cripple Creek District Man Is Said to Be of Much Value—Lessees Will Start Work on Two Claims of the Kaffira Company.

Special to the Gazette.

Cripple Creek, May 2.—An improved [illegible] for separating gold [illegible] substances has been discovered by Dr. Proctor of this district. [illegible] that in order to form amalgam the mercury must be brought into contact with the metal for some time [illegible] with certain [illegible]. His invention [illegible] both of these with a possible [illegible] of 20 pounds to the square [illegible] is so constructed as to allow the chemical action to take place. It was experimented with this morning at the Pike's Peak assay office in Victor and the results were highly satisfactory. By the common table process [illegible] 75 per cent. is saved, this being the perfection of this process. At the [illegible] trial, with simply a crude [illegible], Dr. Proctor's machine saved [illegible] over 90 per cent. The rights have [illegible] protected at the patent office in Washington.

Kaffira.

The Kaffira Gold Mining company recently granted a lease for two years to [illegible] and associates on the May [illegible] Bruin claims. The lease [illegible] a 20 per cent. royalty on all ore. The Kaffira company owns about 11 [illegible] on Squaw mountain, and [illegible] very little work in the way of [illegible] the territory has been [illegible], but it is expected that [illegible] Page and associates will start on [illegible] the plan of work as a very [illegible] vein has been opened up on the first named claim, in a shallow [illegible], and it is thought the lessees ought to be able to encounter some good ore before very long. Their intentions are also to do considerable work on the May Bruin claim a little later in the spring, in fact, as soon as the other property is well under way.

Lincoln Mountain.

Anthony Pfeiffer, an eastern capitalist who has large holdings in the Lincoln Mountain company, was in town this morning, after looking over the ground for the past week with a view of further investments. Mr. Pfeiffer is very favorably impressed with the showing in the Gillett section of the camp, and it is reported that the company he represents intends to erect a cyanide mill on their property to treat the low grade ore from their property and this section.

Bonanza King.

C. A. Ross and others have secured a lease on block 15 and half of block 16 of the Bonanza King, on Gold hill, and will commence active operations Monday morning. Shortly after securing the lease on this property they received a handsome cash offer for their lease if they would immediately turn it over, but refused to accept it.

Hull City Placer.

The Cripple Creek Mining company, operating on the Hull City Placer mine under lease, is now shipping some two carloads of ore each day, which average about $45 to the ton. The shaft on the property has now reached a depth of 1,260 feet, and as soon as a station is finished drifting will be commenced towards the ore body from the bottom level.

GOOD REPORTS ARE RECEIVED FROM PROPERTY IN MEXICO

A good strike is reported from the Golfo Del Oro property on the Yaqui river in Mexico. The property in which the strike was made is known as the La Cobrisa and the vein is four feet wide, carrying $[illegible] to the ton across its entire width. Dr. Grover of this city has received samples from the new find which show free gold all through the rock and it is said that the vein is composed entirely of this grade of mineral. The ore is all of a free milling variety and can be washed easily after it is crushed. The expense of milling is said to be small.

Through this section of Mexico three railroads are planned and all three surveys cross the Golfo Del Oro property. Two surveys have already been made and it is practically assured that the Mexican-Orient road will be built in the near future. The road follows the course of the Yaqui river, and runs through a fine agricultural valley as well as a vast mineral country.

The Golfo Del Oro company is composed of local people, Dr. Grover, J. K. Brunner and others.

Portland with a single transaction advanced to $1.80, with none offered at that figure at the close. Vindicator, although no sales were made, showed much strength with 85 bid and 91 per share asked.

[illegible] THE MINES [illegible] KNOWN [illegible]

Owing to the pressure of other business, the committee which is soliciting subscriptions to the fund to be raised for the resurvey of the Cripple Creek district did not accomplish much yesterday, but D. V. Donaldson stated that there was no doubt that the money would be secured this week. The extension of time allowed by the government will enable the committee to see a number of mining men, mill owners and railroad people who have not been approached, and the balance of the amount to be raised, about $400, will be forthcoming in a few days.

PHARMACIST LEASE

Returns have been received from a shipment of a carload of ore from the Johnson sublease on a block of the Pharmacist ground, which shows values of nearly two ounces per ton in gold. The lessee received over $[illegible] for his share and the company retained $47. This shipment is understood to be the first of a series from the block of ground under lease, as it is said that there is a considerable body of ore in sight.

SHIPMENT FROM THE DEAD SHOT

It is reported that the lessees on the Dead Shot property on Rose Bud hill, are preparing a shipment of ore which is expected to run $25 to the ton. The ore is being broken at a depth of 25 feet, where the original find was made, and the shaft has now reached a depth of 40 feet. It is the intention of the lessees to install a steam plant of machinery as soon as the shaft has reached the 100-foot point.

EASTERN MARKETS

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

Report from J. S. Bache & Co., to Otis & Hough, Bankers and Brokers, 127 Pike's Peak Ave.

New York, May 2.—The statement had no effect on prices and market continued to rule in the same spiritless manner as yesterday, with the exception of Metropolitan, which showed some activity and advanced on buying by interests of the company. Market is waiting for some lead on part of the large operators.

From McIntyre & Marshall—Speculation in the stock market continues small and professional and chiefly in the nature of scalping operations for small, quick turns. Most of the larger operators and leading financial interests are either away or contemplate leaving the city for their usual European vacations, and those who are left are disinclined to either add to their interest or take the initiative in encouraging a resumption of active bull speculation at this time. We think the reason for this may be found in the uncertainty which now surrounds the new crop situation and outlook from the damage inflicted to winter wheat from this week's killing frost and also to corn and cotton in Texas and the southwest from the same condition and drouth the past month, and also on account of the labor troubles and the greatly increased cost of operating expenses on the railroads and industrial companies from the higher cost of labor and materials, and the advance in foreign exchange rates to the gold shipping point, with some prospect of several millions going out by next week's steamers for Paris. It is too early to determine the extent of the damage done to winter wheat by the week's freezing temperatures. Today's bank statement was surprisingly unfavorable, owing to the unprecedented increase in loans. This increase was due mainly to the financing of the new Erie bonds. We look for a dull and sagging market next week.

CHICAGO GRAIN & PROVISIONS.

Furnished by Logan & Bryan to Otis & Hough, Bankers and Brokers, 127 Pike's Peak Ave.

Chicago, May 2.—Wheat—Liverpool, ¼d to ¾d higher. Paris, holiday; Antwerp, unchanged. Market here was very quiet and firm. While the news was on the whole strong, there was enough profit taking to prevent any material advance. Cables indicate that the outlook for the French and German crop is still poor. In the Duluth market there was a good export business being done and there was a good sale at St. Louis for export. Interior stocks in the northwest are practically exhausted. Spring wheat seeding has been checked at the moment by cool weather. Good authorities estimate that from 70 to 80 per cent. of it has already been done in the northwest. The Pacific coast is renewing its complaints of unfavorable conditions there and are predicting a crop no bigger than last year. Nothing definite in way of effect of recent frost on winter wheat is yet known. Situation to us seems to have gained something in strength during the week and we are inclined to look for better prices the coming week. Estimated cars, 35.

Corn—Liverpool unchanged to ¼d higher. Market here was very quiet and steady. There was nothing in the speculative trade worthy of comment, and the cash position seems about unchanged. The indications are that local stocks of No. 2 corn will likely increase in the near future. The delivery of May stuff went into the hands of scattered holders. Buyers in the country report some increase in offerings but they are not large. Estimated cars, 225.

Oats—Market was firm. Further rains throughout the west and indications of rain in this state during next 24 hours was the cause. No change in the cash situation. There may have been a slight improvement, but the demand on the whole is not urgent. Estimated cars, 185.

Provisions—May pork was higher and the action of the market indicates that our advices that this option is in a badly congested state, are true. Lard and ribs are about unchanged. There was a good covering of shorts and the packers were picking up some stuff through brokers. There is little or no improvement in the cash demand.

WORK ON THE [illegible] SECTION NEAR CAMERON

A carload of ore will be sent out during the coming week from the [illegible] of blocks 29 and 30 of the Cameron school section, under lease to the Gideon-Athens company. The ore is coming from the workings at a depth of 110 feet in the shaft, where the vein is 4½ feet in width and averages around $30 to the ton for the milling product. At the present time there is a good tonnage of ore on the dumps, although small shipments of sorted rock have been sent out heretofore, which showed higher values and with depth it is expected that the values will increase. The main shaft is now down 154 feet and at this depth a new vein has been encountered which shows very good assays.

At a depth of 100 feet a crosscut has been run out for a distance of 95 feet, to cut under a rich round pit [illegible] vein, at that point showed a width of 21 feet, although the metaliferous portion is broken in [illegible] being the option of the operators to [illegible] the point where it was opened for which [illegible] one north and one [illegible] and the other running east and west. At this point a winze is being sunk on the vein to connect with the drift from the shaft. The company is also continuing sinking the shaft and expects to go to the 300-foot point before [illegible] on the ore. Considerable activity is noted in this section of the district and several good shippers have been opened up. The property is owned by the state and leased out in blocks for long periods at a low rate.

SWORN STATEMENT

A Bright, Convincing Way of Telling the Fact About a Brand New Company.

Hot air stories printed or spoken deceive people, but when men swear to conditions, they tell the absolute truth. Send today for our sworn statements about the new company, not what others say, who never saw our mines, but what our mining engineer has solemnly put into—he having seen.

The Roderick Dhu Gold Mines Co.—New Co. organized Mar. 10, 1903.

Capital stock, 1,500,000 shares; treasury reserve, 1,200,000; non-assessable, fully paid; par value, $1.00 per share.

Operating two patented gold mines in the best gold spot in Colorado. Developed 200 feet, exposing 300 feet of ore, to a depth of [illegible] feet, in [illegible]. One stope ready to extract computes 30,000 tons of ore. The property from a small area has already produced nearly [illegible] million of dollars and likely again under our management, to become a great shipper.

Most advantageous surroundings—a railroad already built to our dump. Hauling charges 65 cents per ton; treating charges $1.50. Twenty mills ready to treat our ores within two miles. It's free milling gold ore, permanent in true fissure veins.

Competent, experienced mining engineer, a graduate of two mining schools, in charge.

We believe positively Roderick Dhu will be on a steady shipping basis by July 4 next.

If you help us equip the mine and meet our contracts, we will surely do it and divide the profits with you honestly and fairly.

100,000 shares only offered at 7 cents per share, to install hoist and retimber the openings, making them safe and permanent.

Subscriptions must be made previous to May 10th. If oversubscribed, money returned.

100,000 shares may be offered, if necessary, but at a much higher price.

Act promptly—seize opportunity—this advertisement may not appear again.

Write at once for advance prospectus, samples of gold ore and fullest particulars free, or, better, send postoffice money order or draft for all the stock you can buy and investigate till May 10th—your money freely returned on that date, if you ask it, or are not satisfied. FOR SALE—REAL ESTATE

ARE YOU TIRED OF PAYING RENT? If so, we would like to explain to you our plan of building homes and selling them on easy monthly installments. WE HAVE BUILT HUNDREDS of homes in Colorado Springs AND SOLD THEM in this way. Many have paid out and have clear title to their property, making them independent of landlords. BRIEFLY OUR PLAN IS THIS—

YOU SELECT A LOT in our Fourth or Fifth additions (which range in price from $175.00 to $[illegible]00.00). GIVE US YOUR IDEAS as to the size and style of house you wish and the amount of money you wish to put into it. WE THEN GET OUT PLANS, and if they meet with your approval we proceed to build, charging you the actual cost construction.

THE PLAN OF PAYMENT is as follows: The first payment is approximately 10 per cent. of the cost of house and lot and the monthly installments are 1 per cent. of same; thus, if your house and lot cost $1,500, you pay us as a first payment $150 and monthly installments of $15.00. Interest is charged on the amount left unpaid each month at the rate of [illegible] per cent. per annum and is payable monthly. In this way both interest and principal are paid in easy installments and each month the interest grows less as the principal is reduced.

THIS IS A FAIR PROPOSITION, the proof of its popularity being the number of contracts for both vacant and improved property that we have in force.

IF INTERESTED in our plan will you not allow us to explain more fully its merits and show you what we have done for others?

Ware on Colorado Suits.

... Miller returned yesterday from his trip to Washington and says the Kansas-Colorado water litigation will be settled as soon as possible, as both parties to the suit are anxious to have the question decided and will make every effort to push the case.

In ... the situation he said: "I am much pleased with the outlook for Colorado. Commissioner of ... Eugene A. Charter Convention.

The Civic society's charter delegation has ... a ticket to the voters of the city for members of the charter convention which, it is thought, will meet with approval and be ratified by both political organizations, the chamber of commerce and the Charter club. Talk of a ticket being nominated by the last two parties named has been dropped. The tramway's representatives in both parties are the cause of some little opposition, but it is expected that they will be easily overcome. Expressions of satisfaction at the result of the convention are heard almost universally and all opposition to the fusion charter ticket is dying out, and advocates of a straight party ticket are in the minority. It is expected that the civic ticket will be elected.

Captain Hobson's Visit.

... Richmond Pearson Hobson, ... was a visitor in the city ... coming up from Pueblo. ... Captain Hobson is tall ... with a decidedly intellectual face, and added to this is a ... voice.

In reply to the question by your representative as to what he was advocating in his lectures, Captain Hobson said: "I believe our nation is the strongest on earth and I have seen them all. It has the greatest destiny of any nation, and this is wrapped up in our navy. I am advocating the Monroe doctrine and protection of the Philippines. The only means of accomplishing this destiny is to give the nation a great navy and make her mistress of the seas."

Captain Hobson was greatly pleased with his trip over the Short Line, remaining in the district only long enough to take a trip over the high line and returning on the low line electric, when he left for Colorado Springs, where, he said, he would deliver a lecture tonight.

Captain Hobson asked many questions concerning the age of the city and as to its prospects for the future. He also expressed the desire to spend more time here to visit one of the large mines. He also spoke about a trip to the top of Pike's Peak, signifying his intention of starting the first thing tomorrow morning from Colorado Springs, and walking to the top and back. At this point in the interview the car approached and the captain left for his trip over the district.

Victor, May 2.---Thursday night burglars broke into the cabin of a miner on Bull hill and attempted to ransack his trunk, while he was working on night shift. After searching everywhere for valuables, thought to be in the room, they commenced to break open the trunk, when in ... a look it discharged a loaded gun which had been placed there in a position to catch the next one that tried to get in.

One of the men evidently received the full charge in his body, and without disturbing the contents of the trunk, both fled. The owner of the cabin reported the matter to the sheriff's office and they visited the scene of the shooting. For quite a distance towards Altman the men could be traced by the blood from the wounded man and finally the officers discovered an undershirt saturated with blood which was probably discarded by the burglar. At this point the trail was lost.

No arrests have been made as yet, and the matter has been kept as quiet as possible in the hope that the burglar's wounds might lead to his apprehension.

Death of Ben Ingram.

Ben Ingram died at the home of his sister, Mrs. J. Price, near the Mary McKinney mine, pneumonia being the immediate cause of death, but this is attributed to exposure received when Mr. Ingram fell from an electric car at Morning Glory station a week ago last Wednesday night. The fall rendered him unconscious, fracturing the skull in two places, and he remained under the trestle near the station in an unconscious condition for more than six hours during the coldest part of the night. For a time he grew better but then worse until death relieved his sufferings last night.

Deceased came from Aspen two years ago, being unmarried and 27 years of age. Funeral will take place from the home of his sister tomorrow afternoon, interment at Mt. Pisgah cemetery.

CLERGYMAN REFUSES TO MARRY DIVORCEE

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Hartford, Conn., May 2.---With the bridal party approaching the chancel and the church filled with fashionable people, the Rev. Dr. James J. Goodwin, of Christ Episcopal church, refused to perform the ceremony and dismissed the guests because in reading the marriage license he found the bridegroom had been divorced 18 years previously. The wedding was to have been that of A. Lincoln Chase, manager of a department store here, and Miss Gladys A. G. Geer, daughter of one of the oldest residents of Hartford.

Mr. Chase and Miss Geer had started down the center aisle when suddenly at the rector's call the party stopped within a few feet of the chancel rail. After a hurried consultation Mr. Chase and Miss Geer, much embarrassed, turned and hurried out of the church. Returning to the altar, Dr. Goodwin said: "Friends, the wedding has been postponed." This was all the explanation made.

Later Dr. Goodwin said: "The laws of the Episcopal church forbid me to marry a divorced person. I did not know the circumstances until I read the license while I was in the church ready to begin the ceremony. I am very sorry to have caused the party any annoyance, but I could not act otherwise."

Miss Geer and Mr. Chase, after leaving the church, were driven to the home of the Rev. H. H. Kelsey and were married.

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Albany, N. Y., May 2.---The Rt. Rev. Wm. Croswell Doane, D. D., Protestant Episcopal bishop of Albany, who is known throughout the United States as being strenuously opposed to the marriage of divorced persons, asserts that the Church of England had nothing to do with the recent marriage of Wm. K. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Rutherford, in London, beyond the fact that the ceremony was sanctioned by one of the chancellors, whom he regards in the same light as a civil official who issues licenses in the country. The bishop said: "It is a very grave scandal, but the Church of England has nothing to do with it beyond the fact that Mr. Vanderbilt secured a clergyman of the church to marry him. He applied to the chancellor for the license and got it. The chancellor's position in England is about the same as that of civil official who issues licenses in this country. The bishop of London had nothing to do with it and therefore the church itself was not involved."

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

New York, May 2.---Bishop Frederick Burgess, of the Long Island Episcopal diocese, speaking of the marriage, said: "This could not possibly occur in this country as our ecclesiastical laws of the Episcopal church would not for a moment permit it. I have no doubt whatever that the Rev. Mr. Hidden, who performed the ceremony will be reprimanded. In this country it would result in the clergyman being suspended from his diocese and this would virtually be a complete suspension from the church, as he could not enter any other diocese.

"I am personally very much opposed to divorced people marrying in the Episcopal church, even though one may be innocent."

AMERICA THE ARBITER

[illegible] RICHMOND P. HOBSON

[illegible] WORLD'S DESTINIES

"America is destined to be the arbiter of the destinies of the world," stated Lieutenant Richmond P. Hobson at the Temple theater last night. This was the sentiment of an address lasting for nearly two hours, and around it Lieutenant Hobson marshaled his arguments and declared that as a necessary concomitant, America must have a navy capable of coping with the powers of the world.

An enthusiastic audience listened to his arguments and applauded freely at every patriotic expression. "America is within a few years to be the mistress of the seas and the leading nation of the world," he declared, "but there is one essential in all this. In order to acquire this position and hold it we must have power, we must be able to cope with those who would challenge our supremacy. Our long coast line more than that of all Europe and the immense value of our shipping demand that we have a navy to uphold our interests wherever they are established.

Constructive Policy.

"I would recommend that a constructive program be laid out for the acquiring of the necessary navy. I would appropriate $40,000,000 for the work of the navy for the coming year and increase that appropriation with every year until we had reached the required strength." The military training of Lieutenant Hobson showed in his every action and the military spirit was breathed throughout his address. While he pleaded for the enlargement of the navy and the acquiring of supreme power, he denied that he was a supporter of militarism and declared that a large navy was not like a large army, and would be the surest guaranty against war. "America is the only nation in history that will be able to acquire supreme power and retain it," he stated in closing. "We have in America the intelligence and the sagacity to acquire power, and to use it so as not to dissipate it or bring down ruin in its train.

"The disarmament of Europe can never be accomplished by Europe; in America lies the hope of the thousands who are struggling under the weight of militarism. America will bring about the disarmament of Europe."

At the close of the address many of those in the audience came forward and shook hands with the "hero of the Merrimack." He will make a trip to the summit of Pike's Peak today and take a drive to the Garden of the Gods. He will leave in the evening for his next engagement.

Dr. S. E. Solly and Dr. J. A. Patterson, members of the American Medical association, left last night for New Orleans to attend the session of the association which begins May 5.

Dr. Solly took with him the plans for the proposed Cragmor sanatorium, which is to be erected in this city, and while in the south and east he expects to add to the subscriptions that have been made to erect the building and provide for its maintenance. He will attend the annual meeting of the Congress of Physicians and Surgeons to be held in Washington, D. C., beginning May 12.

Much interest has been manifested by eastern capitalists in the local project, and it is understood that sufficient financial support has already been enlisted to insure the success of the sanatorium. A number of wealthy and influential physicians in the east are interested and when the plans are submitted to them by Dr. Solly it is expected that the financial end will be practically completed. The plans were drawn by Architect MacLaren of this city and cover the requirements of an institution of this kind as fully and as completely as any building in the country. The plans were drawn under the direction of Dr. Solly, and provide for innovations that are not in use in many of the hospitals in the country.

From assurances already received it is stated that work on the building may be started within the next two months, although it is understood that the entire sum needed will be raised before the work is begun.

The regular annual election for the purpose of selecting school directors for school district No. 11, will be held tomorrow. The polling places selected are the High school, the Lowell school, the Washington school and the Steele school, the first named for the central and eastern district, the second for the south end, the Washington for the west side, and the Steele for the north end. The ballot boxes will be opened at 2 o'clock and close at 6 o'clock. At 8 o'clock Tuesday evening the new board will meet and effect an organization. Such business as may come before the meeting will also be transacted.

A peculiar thing about this year's election is that there are only two candidates for two positions, and what is puzzling the school officials is, must there be any limit on the number of votes cast, or will one vote for each candidate elect that candidate. It is figured that one vote would be a majority in each case. The school law does not cover the point. It is not expected that a very large vote will be polled, as the competition between candidates that usually characterizes the school elections, will be lacking.

The two candidates for positions on the board of education are Mrs. W. H. R. Stote, who is running to fill the one year or unexpired term of R. C. Thayer, and W. P. Kinney, of the west side, who is running to succeed Judge W. S. Morris, whose five-year term has expired.

[illegible] Wedding

Out of the chance meeting of two young soldiers while on sick leave in Japan from the American army in the Philippines, grew a strong friendship between Captain C. Clyde Spicer of this city and Captain Winfield Scott Overton, U. S. A.

So Captain Spicer figured the other day at an elaborate home wedding in Washington, D. C., as one of the principals. He was best man at the marriage of Miss Constance Lydia Mills, daughter of General and Mrs. Anson Mills, and Captain Overton. Miss Kline, a cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. Chaplain Pierce of Fort Myer officiated. Captain Harry Orndorf and Lieutenant Martin of the Twenty-fifth Infantry acted as groomsmen. Fifty relatives and close friends witnessed the ceremony in the Dupont circle residence. At the wedding breakfast and reception that followed there were fully 500 guests.

On his return home Captain Spicer went to New York city, where he has been engaged in the study of law at Columbia university.

Joseph Harper has been awarded the contract for making improvements on the store building occupied by Hibbard & Co.'s drygoods firm on South Tejon street. The contract was let by wire yesterday by the Stillman estate of New York city, which owns the building. The improvements will cost between $10,000 and $15,000. Mr. Harper will begin work immediately.

The second floor of the building is to be built back 120 feet to the alley, and a number of other changes made. The basement will be fitted up as a reserve stock room and a steam heating plant installed. An Otis elevator of the newest type, of the same model as is to be used in the new bank building, will be installed in the middle of the building, near the present stairway.

In the rear of the main floor, offices, cloak rooms and toilet rooms will be fitted up. In the center of the main ceiling two skylights, one 20 feet long and the other 24 feet long, will be built for furnishing light to the store.

The front of the building will be completely remodeled. Pressed brick will be used. On the first floor two large bent glass show windows will be installed, while the second floor will have a solid plate glass front. The main entrance to the store will be tiled. A new stair will also be built east of the present one and between which and the elevator will be built a new wrapping counter.

The police have on their records the history of a case peculiar in criminal annals. George Tuttle was arrested several days ago charged with having stolen five checks from the office of the Crumpton & Gambrill Coal company, the checks amounting in all to $83. It was also charged that he had attempted to pass one of them. He was unsuccessful in this however, and when arrested he had all the checks still in his pocket.

Under the law these checks so far as the theft is concerned are worth only the actual value of the paper on which they are written and Tuttle could not be charged with having stolen their face value. While in reality he had taken property to the value of $83 he could not in the eyes of the law be charged with having stolen any more than the actual value of the paper. This was considered too small to warrant the swearing out of an information against Tuttle and in order to inflict a certain amount of punishment he was charged with vagrancy and has been in jail since the theft of the checks. He will be released in a few days without having to answer for the theft of the checks. He will thus occupy the position of having stolen $83 worth of property without having had to suffer the penalty usual in such cases.

Tomorrow will be motion day in the district court. Their hearing will be the last county business transacted in the old county court house at Nevada avenue and Kiowa street. There are but few motions for the hearing of the court, the most important being the motion of the majority stockholders in the Golden Cycle controversy for an increase in the bond of the minority in relation to the injunction now held by them over the workings of the Theresa property by L. E. Hill, general manager of the Golden Cycle company. The application for a receiver made yesterday by E. C. Pew to take charge of the property of the Oil Creek company's property will also come up. A number of cases will be brought up for citation to the May term of court. Judge Louis W. Cunningham will act on these motions and with the close of the business of the day he will declare the final adjournment in the old district court rooms.

GRAND JURY ADJOURNS TO TAKE UP WORK AGAIN TOMORROW

The grand jury, after a short session yesterday, adjourned until tomorrow morning. No further arrests have been made, although capiases are in the hands of the sheriff's office. Sheriff Gilbert returns from St. Louis tomorrow and it is expected that a number of arrests on indictments returned will be made the coming week. The special committee appointed to examine the books of the county treasurer and other clerical matters will probably report to the grand jury next Thursday.

The selection of a board of arbitrators for the trial of the claims of Leslie W. Popejoy against the county, for extras alleged to have been furnished in the plastering of the new court house building, will doubtless be arranged for tomorrow. The attorneys for Popejoy have already affixed their signatures to an agreement to this effect, and it was stated by the county commissioners yesterday that they would probably give their consent to the same agreement tomorrow.

This agreement provides for the selection of an arbitrator by the respective sides, the selection to be made within three days, and these two to select a third within five days. Should they fail to agree on the third member of the board, then the attorneys for the respective sides will select the other member.

RUSHING WORK ON THE NEW RESERVOIR

The earthwork on the High Line reservoir dam will be completed by the end of next week and with its completion the reservoir will be practically finished. A short time will be necessary in which to finish the strengthenings on the inside of the dam and the work of the contractors, Ord & Swope, will be at an end.

The work of the engineering department will then be directed to the laying of the connecting pipeline which it is estimated will be finished by the middle of August. At that time it is expected the reservoir will be ready for use and the water will be turned into it.

The Greatest of Shows.

Is coming on wings of steam, the ever popular Campbell Bros. aggregation, a household word from the Atlantic to the Pacific, will be at Colorado Springs, Friday, May 8. Make ready for the great event. Not a few of our readers have seen and known of the Great Shows in the east for many years. The press everywhere they have pitched tents, speak of the Big Shows in highest terms of praise and say that from entrance to exit it is a source of continuous pleasurable surprise, being modern in every detail with a succession of hitherto unseen exhibits beyond the most sanguine dream of the most optimistic showgoers. From small acorns large trees grow. Campbell's, not unlike other enterprises, had but a small beginning, but by judicious toil, care and research has now reached the stage beyond a fear of successful rivalry and has today without question America's best shows.

A petition for a receiver was filed in the district court yesterday by Edgar G. Pew against the Oil Creek Gold Mining company. Pew was at one time a miner in the employ of the company and was injured while at work on their property. The petition states that a judgment in the sum of $18,000 was rendered in favor of Pew, which has not yet been paid. It is alleged in the petition that the defendant company was insured against loss from accident and that, under the contract of insurance, there is now due the defendant, it is the amount of the judgment held by the plaintiff. It is also alleged that the capital stock of the defendant company is not fully paid up and that there is still owing enough to satisfy the judgment in question. A receiver is asked for the reason as stated in the petition, that the defendant refuses to collect all or the amount of the insurance policy on the unpaid stock.

In the district court yesterday a decree was entered by Judge Cunningham quieting the title to the property at the southwest corner of Tejon and Pikes Peak streets, on which the new Colorado National Bank building is being erected. The suit for this purpose was brought by Emily McFerran, Jane Trimble, Estelle Hunter and Maud Paine, heirs-at-law of Joseph H. McFerran.

Fire-Fighter's Story

How the Strongest Man in the Philadelphia Fire Department—Once the Weakest—Gained His Strength and Health by Using Swamp-Root, the Great Kidney and Bladder Remedy.

HERE'S the story of a man who was near death's door and was saved by using Swamp-Root.

If he came to you and said: "My friend, do you suffer with kidney trouble? Does your back ache? Do you feel bad all over and cannot tell exactly what's the matter? Have you tried medicines or doctors without benefit? Are you about discouraged? Then do as I did, and get well—Use Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. I know it will cure you."

If he did this, would you believe him?

Wouldn't you, if you were a sufferer, follow his advice, knowing that he bore living, sentient, vital testimony to the wonderful virtues of this great natural remedy?

HUGO J. [illegible], that is just what Hugo Hutt, the strongest man in the Philadelphia Fire Department, hero of a hundred battles with the flames, is doing now through the medium of this newspaper.

Hugo Hutt has been connected with the Philadelphia Fire Department for the past four years. He is stationed at the engine house at Nineteenth and Callowhill streets. Mr. Hutt is known as the strongest man in the Fire Department and has taken many prizes at athletic tournaments for his prowess in the field of sports.

He is also an ex-sergeant of the United States infantry, having for several years been stationed at Fort Niobrara, Neb. Mr. Hutt also served with the Sixth Pennsylvania Regiment during the Spanish-American war.

HUGO HUTT, PHILADELPHIA FIREMAN.

HERE is the story as he gave it to a special representative of Philadelphia's Great Newspaper, "The North American":

"You will hardly believe it when I tell you there was a time when my body was in such a diseased condition that my relatives and friends would have, at no time, been surprised to learn of my death. It was all due to kidney trouble, for which I could secure no relief. I was under the care of my family physician for a number of years, but he was unable to do me any good. I also consulted two noted specialists on kidney diseases, but they were unable to give me more than temporary relief. I had already made application to join the army, but was turned down on account of my bad physical condition.

"I was advised to try that greatest of all remedies—SWAMP-ROOT.

"I wrote to Dr. Kilmer & Co., at Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle, and its effect upon me was so noticeable that I went immediately and bought a supply from my druggist, with the result that in a comparatively short time I had entirely recovered and became the man you see me now.

"I served a number of years in the army, and for the past four years I have been connected with the Philadelphia Fire Department. My work, both in the army and fighting fires in Philadelphia, has been of the most arduous, and work that I could not do, did I not have a strong physique.

"I do not know what the words, 'Kidney Trouble' mean now, and do not expect to. I cannot speak too highly of Swamp-Root. A few bottles of this great remedy did more for me than a dozen physicians."

(Signed) HUGO HUTT,

2225 Vine St., Philadelphia, Pa.

AND this is only one man's story—if the average reader of a newspaper could be persuaded to read the thousands of such testimonials which come to Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the kidney troubles which now afflict humanity would be cut down fifty per cent.

For these testimonials all prove beyond a doubt that the greatest cure for kidney, liver and bladder troubles is

NATURE'S GREATEST AID TO THE SUFFERING.

EDITORIAL NOTICE—Swamp-Root is so remarkably successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all of our readers who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent absolutely free by mail, also a book that tells all about it and its wonderful cures. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. In writing, be sure to mention that you read this generous offer in the Colorado Springs Sunday Gazette. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all druggists. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

The tent colony will not only be a seasonal feature, but will be in operation throughout the year, as there is little bad weather at Colorado Springs. Plans have progressed sufficiently to outline what the tent colony will include. Another arrangement for the sick and one which will elicit gratitude was also announced yesterday. Arrangements have been made by Rev. E. Evans Carrington, secretary of the Associated Charities, to provide sterilized milk and ice during the summer months for the sick poor, more especially for sick children. Mr. Carrington states that further particulars will be announced later. Most of the large dairies in the vicinity have sterilizing plants and plans are now under way by which all orders from the Associated Charities will be taken care of, despite the heavy consumption due to the tourist season.

The speakers for the sixth annual ... of the Apollonian society of Colorado college have been selected. President Pettibone will act as toastmaster and President Slocum of the college and Messrs. A special car will carry the banqueters to Manitou. The invited guests of the club are President and Mrs. Slocum, Prof. and Mrs. Shedd, and Prof. and Mrs. Hills. A fine menu has been prepared by the management of the Cliff house and the members of the club are expecting to give the most successful banquet in their history.

DR. BRAISLIN ... ANNIVERSARY ...

Rev. Edward Braislin, D. D., of the First Baptist church, will preach only two more Sundays after today before leaving on a two-months trip to the Atlantic coast, taken for pleasure and to fill a number of important engagements.

Dr. Braislin will spend the greater part of the time in and near New York and Boston, but has an occasion of such personal interest near Burlington, New Jersey, where, on July 7, all living representatives of his grandfather's family will gather to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the purchase of the ... which has been in the unbroken possession of the family during the century. There will be ... thirty descendants of his grandfather, nearly all of the adults being college graduates and modestly active in art, science, manufacture and professional life in various parts of the country. Of his own generation there are five now living, two of whom are preachers.

The old farm comprises some one hundred acres, overlooking Burlington, one of the oldest towns in America and beautiful with fertile fields and forests. Dr. Braislin's mother was born in the farm house, still standing, in which she died, 77 years of age. The only death among her adult children was that of Priscilla I. Braislin, for 22 years professor of mathematics in Vassar college. Dr. Braislin's own childhood and early manhood was passed on the farm, where during the first seven years of his public ministry his home was under the old roof. Two sisters still reside there.

He leaves Colorado Springs two weeks from tomorrow, and will first go to Buffalo, N. Y., to attend the American Baptist "May Anniversaries," which assemble representatives from all of the churches of the denomination north of the Potomac in the east and from the great west and Canada. Dr. Braislin will represent the American Baptist Home Mission society in an address before a mass meeting in the Prospect Avenue church of Buffalo, Sunday evening, May 24. At this meeting there will be two other addresses, by representatives of the Foreign Missionary society and the National Publication society. The anniversaries bid fair to be the largest in the history of the denomination and of varied and unusual interest. The program covers 10 days.

From these meetings Dr. Braislin will go with his family to New York, preach for the Emmanuel Baptist church of Brooklyn July 5; for his old church, the Washington Avenue of Brooklyn, July 12, and for a union meeting of the five churches of Harlem July 19.

MAYOR AND ALDERMEN WILL ... CITY

Business of ... Council Tomorrow Evening

Opening of Bids for Bonds, More Appointments, Recommendations of Committees and Other Work.

The city council at its meeting tomorrow night will have more business before it than any meeting of that body for some time. The most important business will be the opening of bids for the sale of the $409,000 worth of water extension bonds and the calling for bids for the $138,000 worth of redemption bonds, and $60,000 worth of city hall extension bonds. In addition to these bonds a time will also be set for the sale of bonds for the sewer extension work for the coming year. The amount of this issue has yet to be determined by the sewer committee which will meet before the regular meeting of the council to determine the matter.

More Appointments.

The appointment of the remaining city officers will doubtless be made, with the possible exception of the building commissioner. These officers include the assistant city engineer, assistant superintendent of the water department, city chemist and two health officers. These appointments are all made by the heads of the respective departments through the sanction of the council.

The reports of several of the city officials for the month of April will be filed and several committees will have special reports for consideration. The officers filing reports will be retiring Treasurer John A. Voorhees, Dr. P. O. Hanford, Police Magistrate E. C. Hammond and Fire Chief E. E. Baty.

The police committee will report respecting the installation of the new police patrol system. A. L. Patton, chairman of this committee, will ask of the council that the police committee be allowed to spend between $4,000 and $5,000 for the new system instead of the original $3,000, and that it be given the proceeds of the sale of macadam made by the city prisoners and the fines of the police court.

Reports of Committees.

The sewer committee will report on the issue of bonds for the new sewer extension work and a date will doubtless be set for the receiving of bids. The ordinance committee will report several ordinances regulating the treatment of children and dumb animals, which were prepared by the humane society. The finance committee will report respecting the bond of Treasurer Hoagland and the health commission will make a detailed report and recommend the passage of ordinances respecting the conduct of the health department during the future.

It is possible also that Mayor Ira Harris will deliver an address at the regular meeting regarding the policy of his administration. He has refused to state, however, whether he will take such action or not and it cannot be stated positively that he will.

The bills covering the expenses of the last election will be brought before the meeting for indorsement before they are paid by the auditor. These bills amount to over $4,000.

With ... the matters coming up for consideration will make this, the first meeting of the new council, a most important session.

VAN DUSEN HELD ON FOR HIS LIFE

Robert Van Dusen, a switchman in the employ of the Santa Fe railroad, had a narrow escape from death yesterday morning at the Curtis coal mine. While attempting to board the engine from the front, the running board gave way letting Van Dusen to the ground. He retained his hold on the hand rail and thus saved his life. Had he let go of the rail he would have fallen underneath the engine and met a horrible death. As it was he was dragged for a considerable distance before the engineer heard his cries. The engine was stopped and Van Dusen, realizing that he was saved, fell to the ground and when picked up was in a state of collapse, and it hardly seemed possible that he could have withstood the bruising he received for his shoes were literally worn from his feet by being dragged along the roadbed. An examination, however, by Dr. Spicer, proved that no bones were broken, although there were many bruises and scratches on his body. He was taken to his home at 11 North First street, Colorado City, by the ambulance.

... MANITOU ... COLLEGE

Prof. George N. Marden, the treasurer of the college, leaves in a few days for the east to raise funds; this trip is made necessary by the fact that expenses of the past year have increased with the growth of the college and the erection of its two new buildings. There is still a considerable sum to be raised to finish the scientific building, and only one-half the amount required for the new residence hall has been given. Further than this, there is a large deficit in the current expense account to be provided for. It is understood that aside from this effort of Prof. Marden's President Slocum feels obliged to continue the difficult work of trying to raise money in which he has been engaged during all the past year both here and in the east.

ON RECORD IN THE COUNTY CLERK'S OFFICE

A deed was also filed by Sadie Danks to Percy Danks conveying lot 4, in block 24 of Parish's addition for the sum of $1,000.

An affidavit of co-partnership was filed by Albert Horton wherein the members of the firm of the El Paso Suit Cleaning and Pressing company are declared to be Roy Sill and Albert H. Horton. The company is successor to the El Paso Clothes Cleaning and Pressing company and Albert M. Horton takes the place of Earl E. Clark.

A marriage license was issued to Walter L. Kettles of this city and Bessie Anderson of Boone, Ia.

... COLLEGE ... NEBRASKA ...

According to the present arrangements the annual debate between Colorado college and the University of Nebraska will be held Friday evening in Perkins hall. Last week the Lincoln debaters asked that a postponement be made as they could not be in Colorado Springs on May 1, the date first selected. Messrs. Van Nostran, Hall and Sager will represent the local institution in the debate.

The debate between Cutler academy and Lincoln High school will be held at Lincoln Wednesday, May 13. Messrs. Roberts, Lehmann and Berron, the academy debaters, are now busily engaged in preparing for the contest.

DUMP PERMITS HAVE ALL BEEN RECALLED

The health commissioner has recalled all dump permits and hereafter all dumping will be on the city dump, west of the Evergreen cemetery.

These permits were recalled, as stated by Health Officer Ryer, because the privileges under them were being abused to such an extent that the city's health was becoming endangered. All scavengers and ash haulers have been notified of the change and all who violate the order will be arrested and fined. Two men were taken into custody yesterday and were each fined $5 and costs. They were George Keys and Frank Carter.

REALTY EXCHANGE AND ITS NEXT LUNCHEON

According to Secretary House of the real estate exchange, it has not been decided whether the exchange shall hold its regular bi-weekly luncheon Tuesday noon or not. R. P. Davis, chairman of the luncheon committee, is now out of the city and may not return until the last part of the week. The exchange has not selected the place where the next luncheon will be held. There is considerable business to come before the next meeting of the exchange.

WILL INVITE GOVERNOR PEABODY TO ATTEND THE COURT HOUSE OPENING

Event Will Be Celebrated by County Officers and Members of the Bar, and Exercises Will Extend Over Three Days.

While the arrangements for the formal opening of the new county court house have not yet taken definite shape, it is announced that the services will be elaborate and complete. The county commissioners announced yesterday that they would take their arrangements so as to co-operate with the members of the bar in the celebration they have in contemplation. It is expected that the date for the event will be set for about the [illegible], although the event may be [illegible]. Three days will be devoted to the opening [illegible] and it is probable that the exercises planned by the members of the bar will be held on the [illegible]. The first two days of the celebration will be [illegible] to the public, and a general invitation will be issued by the county commissioners. The arrangements for these two days are expected to be very informal and will be mainly a time set apart for a public inspection of the new building.

Formal Program

The formal part of the evening will be held on the final day. It is stated by the commissioners that invitations will be extended to Governor Peabody and a number of state officers, as well as to people throughout the county. Invitations will also be extended to all those who have ever held an elective office in the county government. These invitations will include a number who held official positions during the early life of the county, and their presence will make this day's celebration largely an old settlers' gathering. Speeches are to be made during the afternoon, and a review of the county's history will show the development which has taken place since its first settlement.

The Bar Celebration.

The evening of this day's celebration will be devoted to the members of the bar, it is understood. Their part in the program will be devoted to the opening of the new court rooms, and the expression of the sentiment of the legal profession regarding the launching into what will be practically a new life. The contrast of the new court rooms with the old is so marked, and the opening of court in these splendid quarters such an epoch in the life of the bar of the county, that it is deemed necessary to celebrate it in a befitting manner. The leading men of the bar of the county and of the state will be invited to take part in the celebrations of the evening, and their feelings on the occasion will be fitly expressed in the address that will be made.

The offices of the district clerk, the county clerk and the sheriff were moved into their new quarters yesterday, and the district judges will open the new court rooms Tuesday. The county court was moved yesterday and Judge Orr will hear cases in the new court room tomorrow.

Work Is Done.

The work on the building itself is now practically completed and a large force is engaged in cleaning up the debris. The seats and railings in the court rooms are yet to be adjusted but it is understood that all this will be out of the way by tomorrow evening. The county commissioners have had a number of men and several teams at work during the last two or three days, grading around the outside of the building and putting things in shape for sodding. Practically all this, however, will be completed by the time the opening celebrations are held, and the building will be in the best of shape to receive visitors.

Christian Endeavorers Receiving Accommodations for Delegates

Chairman Hawkins of the entertainment committee of the Christian Endeavor union of this city, has received replies from about 20 hotels and boarding houses agreeing to make a reduced rate to Christian Endeavorers who visit the city in July. These replies were in response to letters sent out by Mr. Hawkins asking for rates and the number of persons each house can accommodate. Those who have thus far responded state that they are able to hand an aggregate of about 1,000 persons, the [illegible] ranging from [illegible] downward. [illegible] will be increased to about 40 this week, that number of members of the societies of the city having signified their willingness to work on the committee. As the time approaches for the convention, enthusiasm is increasing and lively interest is being taken in forming plans, both for the entertainment of the visitors and delegates in this city as well as for the work of the convention itself.

The chorus being trained in this city is growing and rehearsals will begin before the end of the month. Preparations are being made for the meetings to be held in a big tent after the national convention adjourns.

Work of [illegible] County [illegible] Will [illegible] Season

[illegible] next two or three weeks [illegible] on the county roads and [illegible] in the employ of the county [illegible] out for the remoter districts [illegible] the last few years a [illegible] settlers have taken up [illegible] within the county and roads are [illegible] from all directions. [illegible] first work of the road [illegible] construction of the [illegible] over the [illegible]. This bridge was [illegible] built last year but the [illegible] at the disposal of the county [illegible] not sufficient to warrant the expenditure required and its construction was deferred until this year.

Regular camps are established by the road-makers during the summer season and it is seldom that the men get back to the city during that time. The work necessary on the county roads is becoming more and more every year as new settlers are moving in and the commissioners find it necessary to increase the force in each season. Practically no work is done during the winter months owing to the severity of the weather in the open country, and a whole year's work must be crowded into the summer season.

Federated [illegible] Will [illegible]

Mrs. Mary C. C. Bradford, president of the Colorado Federation of Women's Clubs, was present at the May meeting of the Colorado Springs Federation of Women's Clubs, held yesterday in the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A. building. The fact of Mrs. Bradford's intended visit and anxiety to hear her [illegible] to the clubs, brought out a large audience. Her address on "The Relation of the Club to the Commonwealth," was received with marked appreciation and frequently interrupted by applause as some point was well taken.

Mrs. Bradford's coming will prove a stimulus to the local club women in their endeavors to prepare for the great [illegible] here in the autumn. While in the city Mrs. Bradford is the guest of [illegible] Giddings, 1406 North Nevada avenue.

After the [illegible] an informal reception was [illegible] the parlors of the Y. M. C. A. [illegible].

The annual [illegible] at the beginning of the [illegible] officers [illegible] for the ensuing year were: President, Miss Flary [illegible]; first vice president, Mrs. Van [illegible]; [illegible] Mrs. C. Rezin [illegible] third vice president, Mrs. J. A. Plummer; [illegible] vice president, Mrs. [illegible]; recording secretary, Mrs. [illegible] M. [illegible] secretary, Mrs. [illegible]; [illegible] was [illegible] that [illegible] at once proceed to federate with the state organization.

Attention was called to the matter of the Goldmark lectures. As the federation voted to have them it is incumbent upon the members to use all possible expedients to dispose of the tickets. Unless special efforts are put forth the receipts in aid of the entertainment fund for the state meeting will be very meager.

SOUTH CHEYENNE CANON.

Mess. Hull Bros. aim this year to make the South Cheyenne a more attractive resort than ever, and to that end have issued season tickets which are good for 20 admissions for the sum of $4. This brings the price of admission to less than 25 cents.

This canon, which is the entrance to the Seven Falls is one of the most beautiful in the state and should be visited by every stranger within our gates. Our own citizens need no reminder of its many attractions.

CHARACTERS [illegible] WOMAN'S [illegible] PLAY

More Than [illegible] People on the Stage.

Rehearsals for "Temple of Fame" Indicate Pleasing Production at Opera House May 15.

There is much pleasurable anticipation regarding the presentation of the "Temple of Fame" by the art and literature department of the Woman's club, in the Opera house on the evening of Friday, May 15.

Rehearsals are going forward very satisfactorily. Mrs. Eleanor Stephens Peckham, who is drilling the cast, is much pleased with the adaptability and talent shown by the performers. The affair will be superbly staged there is no doubt for Mrs. Peckham has had wide experience and great success as a stage manager.

The costuming and every requisite accessory will be attended to with painstaking fidelity and the ensemble will prove of unusual attraction.

Rehearsals for the play are as follows: At Opera house, Monday, May 4, 2 p. m., Princess group-practice. At 5 p. m., children's dance practice.

General rehearsal, Opera house, Wednesday May 6, 4 p. m. It is of the utmost importance that all taking part should be present at every rehearsal as the time before the presentation is brief, the date being Friday, May 15.

Although the names of those who are in the cast have not yet been made public, indeed, many will not be divulged, and can only be conjectured, it will be interesting to earn some of the characters represented. Over 100 characters are in the cast. Among them are:

A May party of 14 children; Queen of Fame, with six maids of honor and two pages; Mother Goose; Helen of Troy; Robinson Crusoe and Friday; Phoebe and Alice Cary; Barbara Frietchie; Mrs. Samanthy Allen; Ruth and Naomi; Pocahontas and Captain John Smith; Portia; group from Uncle Tom's Cabin, including Uncle Tom, Miss Ophelia, Little Eva, Topsy and Aunt [illegible]; Cleopatra, with two attendants; Socrates and Xantippe; Miriam, the [illegible], attended by six Jewels; [illegible]; Columbus and self the Norseman; Mrs. Partington and [illegible]; George Washington and Martha Washington; [illegible]; Mr. Michael Patrick Timothy O'[illegible] and Miss Bridget Maloney; Joan of Arc, and four French peasants; Queen Elizabeth and Mary, Queen of Scots; Red Cross nurse; Tennyson's Princess, attended by Lady Blanche and Lady Psyche and 16 pupils.

A WATER TO DUNNING SERVICE FOR PRESIDENT

DR. CARTER GOES HERE

Dr. Carter, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Kansas City, who will preach the sermon today at Sharon Springs, Kansas, in the presence of President Roosevelt, will arrive in this city Wednesday and will preach at the First Presbyterian church Wednesday evening. Dr. Carter is taking a western trip for a vacation and will remain in Colorado several days, although he will be here for only two days.

During his stay here he will be entertained by the members of the church by drives to various points of interest on Wednesday afternoon and in the evening a reception will probably be held before the evening service.

WILL IMPERSONATE FAMOUS CHARACTER TOMORROW EVENING

Mr. A. F. Howell, the impersonator, who comes here in the role of "David Harum" tomorrow night, has been drawing crowded houses wherever he has appeared. He comes here under the auspices of the City Christian Endeavor union. Considerable money will be required in entertaining the Christian Endeavor delegates who come here next July, and for this reason the members of the local union are particularly anxious to see a full house at the Y. M. C. A. at the "David Harum" entertainment, as the proceeds will go into this fund. Tickets are on sale at the Y. M. C. A.

The Madison Democrat says of Mr. Howell:

"Probably no man living has a finer appreciation of that eccentric, but on the whole lovable, character, as he was in the flesh and certainly no man could give his conception better expression. He is an actor of rare capacity, and his delineation of the old horse-trader's freaks and foibles, and his apparent perversities, and the genuine human realities at the bottom of his nature, was something that won continued applause."

BISHOP OLMSTED WILL CONFIRM CLASSES TODAY

Confirmation services will be held today in Grace and St. Stephen's Episcopal churches. The Right Rev. C. S. Olmsted, bishop of Colorado, arrived from Denver yesterday.

This morning at 11 o'clock the bishop will confirm a class of 25, assisted by the rector, Rev. Benjamin Brewster, in the Grace Episcopal church.

This afternoon at 4 o'clock a class of seven will be confirmed by Bishop Olmsted, in St. Stephen's church, Rev. Arthur N. Taft, the rector, assisting. At both these services the bishop will preach a sermon.

Last evening the following people were invited by Mr. and Mrs. Philip T. Stewart to meet Bishop Olmsted at dinner: Rev. and Mrs. Benjamin Brewster, Rev. and Mrs. A. N. Taft, Dr. and Mrs. Hibbard, Miss [illegible]. During the evening the vestrymen and their families, of both churches, were invited to an informal reception at the Stewart residence, to meet Bishop Olmsted.

CONSUMPTION

TUBERCULOSIS

Asthma, Catarrh and Hay Fever

The Bensonizer cures the worst case of uncomplicated consumption in ninety days, providing the patient is able to be about and get food. This treatment is not of the ordinary excessive stomach-drugging kind. By the use of an inhalant, mixed with the air, the germicide in infinitesimal quantities reaches the deeper air vesicles, and opens the cysts where the germs harbor. It is a bland and soothing medicament for the irritated membrane, and heals the old cavities after the bacilli are destroyed. The Benzonizer Cure is the result of thirty years' study and experiment, and has never failed to eradicate all of the germs contained in the lung tissue, and when the germ action is stopped the patient builds up quickly.

This means a cure.

MRS. L. HERR. WITHOUT HOPE.

Mrs. L. Herr, 16 East Kiowa Street, Art Shop, had severe hemorrhages while living in Portland, Oregon, eight years ago.

She went to Southern California, Arizona and El Paso, Texas expecting relief, but found none.

She came to Colorado Springs and began the Bensonizer Treatment March 10, 1903.

The examination by the city bacteriologist showed bacilli and the streptococcus with pus and epithelium in great quantities, cough constant and rasping, expectoration free, chills and fever daily.

Now, after six weeks' treatment, the second examination shows an absence of the germs, no cough, expectoration has ceased, no chills or fever.

She has to date gained eight pounds in weight. She is a cured woman.

MRS. L. HERR. HAPPY AND WELL.

HOME TESTIMONY

Mr. A. O. Poinier, 426 East Willamette Street, came from Michigan nine years ago with tuberculosis; lost weight from 160 pounds to 123. He began taking the Bensonizer Treatment March 24, 1903. The examination showed the presence of bacilli and other germs, cough constant, expectoration free. At the end of thirty days' treatment the examination by the city bacteriologist showed entire absence of bacilli; cough and expectoration have ceased, and today he is able to attend to a business, requiring a great expenditure of energy.

We also refer to Mr. L. O. Reid, 509 S. El Paso St., a severe case rapidly recovering. Mrs. ... Reese, 618 E. Boulder St., considered a hopeless case, now well on the way to health. Mr. B. Salisch, 601 N. Nevada Ave., nearly well after thirty days' treatment. Mr. ... Lyle, 230 Dale St., under treatment for a short time and is improving rapidly. Mr. B. A. Griffith, 19 N. Oak St., sick with consumption four years, had reached the third stage. He has now been taking the Bensonizer treatment thirty days and is able to do light work, and rapidly approaching a cure. Consultation Free. For our financial responsibility, we refer to ... White of the El Paso National Bank, Colorado Springs, Colo.

The Colorado college Tigers defeated the newly-organized baseball team of the Colorado City Eagles at Bott's park in Colorado City yesterday afternoon by a score of 10 to 7. The college Tigers will play their next championship game with the Miners at Golden next Saturday. This will be the team's first out-of-town game since the intercollegiate series began. BENSON WINS FROM YANGER

Clearly Outpointed Kid Broad in Twenty Fast Rounds at Louisville.

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Louisville, Ky., May 2.—Benny Yanger and Kid Broad went 20 fast rounds at the Southern Athletic club tonight, Yanger getting the decision. Twice during the first 10 rounds the men seemed to tire, but they recuperated quickly and got at it again hammer and tongs. Broad proved a glutton for punishment and Yanger clearly outpointed him. Yanger drew first blood in the third round, with a hard smash to the nose. Broad kept on playing for the body, and his blows seemed to shake Yanger considerably. After this Yanger freshened, but Broad seemed rather winded. The Kid forced the fighting, apparently playing for a quick finish. Broad landed three stinging rights on Yanger's jaw in quick succession at the opening of the sixth. Yanger drove a pair of rights to the stomach and then repeated the dose with vigor which sent Broad into a clinch to hang on heavily.

Broad began to slow down in the eighth under a broadside of merciless body blows. Nevertheless his punches would jar Yanger when they went home. Yanger began to feel around with uppercuts but missed. The ninth round developed a terrific exchange of right jabs to the head with honors about even.

It was anybody's fight up to the seventeenth round, although Yanger appeared the fresher. From this to the end both tried for a knockout without success, the twentieth round ending with a fierce mix-up.

The decision of Referee Hurst, awarding the fight to Yanger, was approved by the crowd, Yanger having clearly proven himself the cleverer and faster man of the two. Broad was very bloody at the finish.

AROUND THE BASES

Omaha again today at 3 o'clock. All Sunday games will be called at 3 o'clock until further notice.

The game tomorrow afternoon will be called at 3:45 in order to allow the fans to get back to the city in time to see the president and the parade.

Villeman will do the slab work for Colorado Springs today, and the fans are expecting him to give a good account of himself.

For the Packing House men Hondo son and Gonding are slated to act in the principal positions.

The fans are on the verge of heart disease. Four straight games have been made victories, but is it a streak of good luck or is it really the genuine, unadulterated article of cracker-jack ball that the locals are putting up.

Every time McNeeley pitches he rises himself more in the eyes of the local fans. McNeeley, when he goes in to pitch, is right there to win his game and he fields his position in the most acceptable manner.

Better join the fog-horn brigade today. Everyone is headed toward Boulevard park and fence seats will be at a premium.

Good hard rooting conducted on the perpetual plan is what does the business and helps to win the games.

LEMOYNE, BROOKLYN LAD, AMERICA'S CRACK SWIMMER

Harry LeMoyne, the wonderful swimmer of the Brooklyn, Mass. swimming club, is without a doubt the greatest short-distance swimmer in America. At the rate he is going now he will soon be able to claim the championship of the world for short distances.

A short time ago he established a new American record in the tank of the New York Athletic club for 100 yards, swimming the distance in one minute 1 2-5 seconds, one and three-fifths seconds under the best previous record, held by J. S. Leary, of New York, and beating Schaeffer's best time by three and three-fifths seconds.

This new mark is within one and two-fifth seconds of the world's record, held by J. H. Derbyshire, of England, whose best time for the 100 is exactly one minute.

LeMoyne made this fast time in a match with Ruberll, of the New York A. C., the short-distance champion of Germany and Austria.

Not only in the 100-yard match race did the Brooklyn boy make a new record, but in the finish of the six-man relay race of 300 yards, he also made a new national record, his time for the 50 yards being 27 1-5 seconds.

LeMoyne is only 19 years old, but so far has not met his equal in swimming. Schaeffer, the New York crack, Trite of the University of Pennsylvania, and the best swimmers from all over the United States have been pitted against him, but have been left far behind.

LeMoyne now holds the world's record for 60 yards, which was formerly held by J. H. Derbyshire, of England, whose best time was 37 seconds. LeMoyne reduced this last spring to 35 1-5 seconds. He is tied with Schaeffer of New York, in the 50-yard event, with a mark of 27 1-5 seconds.

Wants ... Coupes

"It will be a couple of weeks yet before I go into active training for the battle with Corbett," says Champion Jim Jeffries. "You know it does not take place until the latter part of August, and if I were to start in now I would be all out when the time for the real hard work arrived. Too much training is no good for a man who has a hard fight before him. Take those fellows for instance, who are always training. Terry McGovern was working for several months, while Corbett took it easy with the second rate men that he met. The result was when he was matched with Terry he did his first real hard work and entered the ring in grand shape, in fact, so fine that he was enabled to outfight the former champion at every stage. Joe Choynski is another one of the individuals who has done too much training. He is all out so far as hard fighting is concerned, still is he never out of training. The climate of the coast is very agreeable to me and I do not anticipate any trouble in getting myself into proper shape. Jim Corbett will leave for the west in about a week's time. Corbett has been in training for almost a year for the battle and he expects to be in the best possible shape when he faces the champ on in the ring.

George Considine, who attended the fight between Kid McCoy and Jack Root at Detroit, still says that the Kossial is the better man. Considine declares that McCoy was palpably fouled in the second round, when he was on a fair road to victory. Referee Masterson would not allow the claim, however, and thereafter McCoy was not able to fight a real battle. "I am so certain that McCoy was fouled," said Considine, "that I stand ready to back him against Root in another fight for $5,000. He was plainly fouled and suffered so much that I pleaded with him to let me throw up the sponge. But he persisted, hoping against hope, that the effects of the low punch would pass away."

The light heavyweight class, in 1,175 pounds, established at Detroit, will take regular rank hereafter with the acknowledged weight divisions. Jeffries, the gigantic, was really responsible for the making of this class. Discriminating men had begun to realize that it was a fight for men from 167 to 175 pounds to battle against men of the mammoth Jeffries pattern. A new grade of fighters was needed, and is now an actuality, with an honorable, high class young fellow as its present leader and as challenger to all the ambitious ones of the division.

Jack Root's future in the ring will be watched with interest. He should first of all get a fight with Gardner, and wipe out the defeat that the Boston man scored against him, if he can. Root is strong and can make more money in the ring than he has yet made. He is already well fixed, having saved, it is said, about $2,000. The receipts at Detroit were over 7,000. Of this the club got ..., the fighters 60 per cent. Root got away with the long end of the purse, and is some richer than before the fight. He takes as good care of his money as he does of his body. If he continues at the same gait he will have made fighting a most profitable occupation.

Arrangements Completed for President's Visit

The route of the procession will be as follows:

Leave Antlers hotel at 4:35 o'clock.

North on Cascade avenue to Audley place.

West on Audley place to Wood avenue.

North on Wood avenue to Columbia.

East on Columbia to Cascade.

North on Cascade to Del Norte.

East on Del Norte to Weber.

South on Weber to Columbia.

West on Columbia to Nevada.

South on Nevada to Bijou.

West on Bijou to Tejon street.

South on Tejon street to Cimarron.

East on Cimarron to Nevada.

North on Nevada to Pike's Peak avenue.

West to Denver & Rio Grande depot via North Park place. The depot will be reached at 5:10 p. m. and the departure made at 5:15 p. m. The party will be in Colorado Springs one hour and 35 minutes.

FINAL arrangements were completed for the reception last evening when the last meeting of the reception committee was held. The invitations to those who will occupy the Antlers balcony have been mailed, arrangements have been made for the roping off of the passageway through the park, and the spaces around the hotel, and the program completed. The necessity for the thousands being distributed along the route of the procession has been impressed by the chairman of the various committees on the people at large, and the indications are that President Roosevelt will be driven along thoroughfares lined with people from the Antlers hotel to the end of the drive. If the weather man may be believed, the day will be fair, a typical Colorado afternoon in May, and the city authorities yesterday began work on repairing the streets wherever needed, and they will be cleaned and sprinkled. The thorough manner in which the committees in charge have gone into the preparations for the reception means that the impression President Roosevelt will carry away from Colorado Springs will be one of the pleasantest.

According to reports received by the local railroads from agents, there will be a big gathering of citizens from the Cripple Creek district, from the cities and towns west of Colorado Springs, from Pueblo, and as far south as Trinidad. Colorado Springs will be the only stop of importance made after the party leaves Denver, and the low rate of one fare and a third will be taken advantage of by hundreds who will seize this opportunity of greeting the president. It is estimated that 20,000 people will be lined up on Pike's Peak avenue east of the Antlers hotel. Practically all the large business houses and industries will close for at least a part of tomorrow afternoon, the schools will be closed, and Mayor Harris has proclaimed a half holiday.

The City's Guests.

The city's guests will number close to 400, and these with the 100 invitations sent out in addition, mainly to public officials, will fill the available space on the balcony and in the corridors from which a close view may be obtained. The president and members of his party will walk from the Rio Grande depot through the roped-off inclosure to the Antlers hotel. After the speeches, which will consume 25 minutes of the time the president and party will spend in Colorado Springs, carriages will be taken and the drive over the following route begun:

Antlers hotel, north on Cascade avenue to Audley place; west on Audley place to Wood avenue; north on Wood avenue to Columbia street; east on Columbia street to Cascade; north on Cascade to Del Norte; east on Del Norte to Weber; south on Weber to Columbia; west on Columbia to Nevada; south on Nevada to Bijou; west on Bijou to Tejon; south on Tejon to Cimarron; east on Cimarron to Nevada; north on Nevada to Pike's Peak avenue; west to the Denver & Rio Grande station via North Park place.

Twelve carriages will be used. A platoon of mounted police will precede, and Chief King will select the finest appearing men of the department to act as the police guard. The president will also be accompanied by the secret service men who have been constantly with him since the beginning of the tour. As the governor and his staff will return from St. Louis with the presidential train and will continue occupying the special car attached to the train until the state line is reached, Governor Peabody and staff will appear in the procession.

There will be several features, notably in decorations, along the route of the procession. Every school child will have a flag, and these will be waved as the party passes along North Cascade where the children will be lined up. The postal clerks and carriers will be lined up at the postoffice on Pike's Peak avenue as the party passes. The mounted escort for the president, the members of which will be in uniform as far as possible, will accompany the procession. As the train comes in to the Rio Grande depot the Midland band will begin playing. It will also play at the hotel. The High school cadets, the militia companies and the police will add to the military feature.

There will be 50 persons occupying carriages on the drive. The president will ride in the first carriage with Mayor Harris, President W. F. Slocum of Colorado college and D. B. Fairley. The police arrangements afford President Roosevelt an escort in addition to the mounted escort and to the secret service agents. The procession will be headed by six mounted police officers, the two in front being Officers A. T. Pooley and Henry Cornell. The four outriders will be Chief of Police King, Captain of Police Thomas Fair, Marshal George Birdsall of Colorado City and Officer Stephen Armstrong.

The mounted escort, consisting of khaki clad veterans of the Spanish-American war, will accompany the procession, and as five miles of territory must be covered in 40 minutes, the drive will be on the trot.

PRESIDENT THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States, will arrive in Colorado Springs tomorrow afternoon at 3:40 o'clock.

No more enthusiastic nor brilliant welcome has been or will be accorded to the nation's chief executive than will greet the guest of the municipality of Colorado Springs.

It is estimated that 10,000 flags, 40,000 yards of bunting and cheers from 20,000 people will make the president's reception memorable.

The city will entertain as its guests the public officials, both city and county, of that portion of the state to the south and southwest.

On the east balcony of the Antlers hotel will be gathered the representative citizens of this portion of the state, and the members of the president's party.

Mayor Harris will welcome the president, and the president will respond briefly. Forty minutes will then be spent on a drive which will extend over five miles of streets.

Former Rough Riders, veterans of the Spanish-American war, members of the Grand Army, the McKinley club, the postal clerks and carriers, the two militia companies, the High school cadets, a mounted escort and 4,000 school children in addition to the city and county officials and the committees that have arranged for the reception will welcome Mr. Roosevelt.

President Roosevelt is accompanied by Assistant Secretary Barnes, Surgeon General Rixey, Doctor Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia college, M. C. Latta, and the personal guests of the president who have been with him since the departure from St. Louis. The newspaper men who will be in carriages are: H. A. Colman, of the Associated Press; R. H. Hazard, of the Scripps-McRae Press association; Lindsay Denison, of the New York Sun Press association, who will be in the carriage with K. R. Babbitt of Colorado Springs; R. L. Dunn, of Collier's Weekly and N. Laxernick, of Harper's Weekly, who will be in the carriage with Dr. James A. Hart and Judge A. T. Gunnell; H. A. Strohmeyer, official photographer, and George B. Luckey, Leslie's Weekly, who will be in the carriage with County Commissioner F. L. Rouse and Alderman J. C. St. John; P. W. Williams, of the Western Union Telegraph company and J. P. Gooch of the Postal Telegraph company, who will occupy the ninth carriage with C. M. MacNeill and D. V. Donaldson.

The second carriage will have M. C. Latta and the president's guests; the third, Assistant Secretary Barnes, Congressman Brooks, Surgeon General Rixey and Philip B. Stewart; the fourth N. P. Webster and J. L. McGrew, guests of the president, with Dr. Butler and Irving W. Howbert; the fifth, Governor Peabody, Judge L. G. Lunt, Judge L. W. Cunningham and J. G. Shields; the sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth carriages will be occupied by the newspaper men attached to the president's train and citizens of Colorado Springs; the tenth carriage will have J. R. McKinnie, William Lennox, W. S. Jackson and Judge Robert E. Lewis; the eleventh, A. G. Sharp, Arthur Cornforth, R. L. Holland and Judge J. A. Orr; the twelfth, H. L. Chambers and Dr. J. R. Robinson. The thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth carriages will be occupied by the 18 members of Governor Peabody's staff. The governor is coming west with the president.

Arrival of Train.

When the special train arrives at the Rio Grande depot the president will make his way to the Antlers hotel through two lines of uniformed men. Lieutenant Colonel Davis of the Second regiment, Colorado National guard, has charge of the arrangements to the west of the hotel. Drawn up at attention in two lines and on the inside of the ropes will be the two Colorado Springs militia companies, the High school cadets, the [illegible] rank, Knights of Pythias, Canton Colfax, I. O. O. F., veterans of the Spanish-American war in uniform and members of the G. A. R. These lines will reach from the car steps to the steps of the hotel and as the president passes through these men will countermarch and will follow the party to the hotel, filing through the rotunda and going to the assistance of Postmaster Dunn and his mounted rough riders on duty within the ropes on the east side of the hotel. The Midland band will be playing all the time and will continue as the party enters the carriages after the speech making.

Chief of Police King has added materially to the present force, and Special Policemen A. P. Everett, A. T. Pooley, Thomas Armstrong and William Mc-Peri; Merchant Policemen E. McCabe, Samuel Marshall, Samuel Shellenberger, A. J. Radcliff, John Beall, B. D. Dobson, Joseph Baum; Colorado City Officers Roy Gilliland, R. Owen; Marshal Cree of Manitou, and Officers G. A. Whitbeck and Al Jeancon, have been given commissions and will assist in patrolling the city. Chief of Police King yesterday began a dragnet process throughout the city and until after the president departs, all suspicious characters will be arrested and detained until they give a good and sufficient reason for their presence in the city. Three arrests were made yesterday, George Boardman, Ed Brown and Henry Williams, who are charged with vagrancy. The men had a wooden box containing cheap glass beads, which they claimed they were using in making Indian goods that they intended to sell while here.

Joe Atkinson, detective on the Colorado Springs police force, will be the personal bodyguard of President Roosevelt while the latter is in the city. The selection was made by Chief King of the police department yesterday. Detective Atkinson will act in conjunction with the secret service men who accompany the president. He has been on the force for the past 10 years and has an extensive acquaintance with the criminals of not only this state but knows the crooks, pickpockets, thieves and the bad characters of the west. He will be attached to the president and the guard of secret service men as long as the presidential party remains in Colorado Springs.

The police department yesterday began clearing the city of any suspicious characters who may be here in anticipation of the president's visit, and the great crowds that will throng the streets Monday afternoon.

As Arranged.

At the meeting of the central and reception committees at the chamber of commerce last evening it was decided that the social reception and entertainment committee will receive the president at the depot and will go over the route with the party. This committee will meet at the chamber of commerce tomorrow afternoon in time to leave that building at 3:15 o'clock sharp. It was decided that after the speech at the Antlers hotel the people massed in front would give way for the presidential party and the official guests to enter their carriages. As the president has but 40 minutes to cover the five miles, the police have been instructed to permit no delays on the street and will be sufficiently in advance to see that nothing interferes with the rate of progress, which will be at a trot.

Superintendent Mosaffree of the street car system stated that it would be cared for by him in such shape that no cars would be running on the street wherever the president may be. The word was given out that all decorations should be up and finished by 1 o'clock, and the decoration committee was complimented on the splendid work it has done, Chairman Wood of the reception committee said.

The badges for the general reception committee and the guests of the city are now at the chamber of commerce and members of the general reception committee are especially urged to call for these badges as early as possible. Invitations to the balcony at the Antlers have been exhausted and all persons holding these invitations must be in their places on the balcony not later than 3:30 o'clock. It is desired that there shall be no chairs on the balcony, as the space there are very small and many persons must be accommodated. The Colorado Midland band will occupy a position directly across from the Rio Grande station and in the Antlers park until after the presidential party has entered the hotel, when it will take its position on the east porch. No cannonading, burning of fireworks or discharge of firearms will be permitted, as it is held that this will be conducive to the dignity of the city's greeting or to the pleasure of the occasion.

Statue of Pike.

At the suggestion of Secretary Wray of the chamber of commerce and Chairman Wood, the statue of Zebulon Pike, directly in front of the east entrance of the Antlers, was given a thorough cleaning yesterday and several coats of paint. The statue was dedicated and unveiled during the visit of President Roosevelt, then vice president, to Colorado Springs two years ago.

In the Morning.

All over the city the sounds of hammers and the work of decorating will begin tomorrow morning. Several decorations have already been put in shape. At the new Y. M. C. A. building a very effective decoration extends between the parlor windows and under the balconies in the second story, standing boldly out on long stretches of bunting is this legend, in colored letters: "August 20, 1901, we welcomed Vice President Roosevelt to lay the cornerstone of this building. May 4, 1903, we welcome President Roosevelt to the completed building." The large, new banner presented to the Y. M. C. A. by the G. A. R. will wave from the building, and other patriotic devices will be stretched along the front. The young men who room in the building will decorate their own rooms, and in chorus will greet the president and bid to him to come in, if only for a moment. The Women's auxiliary will visit the building early Monday morning and see that it is in spotless order in the hope that the president may be induced to inspect it briefly.

A general holiday will be observed in the public offices. The county clerk's office will close at noon and the offices of the treasurer and assessor will also be closed. The courts will hold a session in the morning and adjourn at noon. Only one office, that of the county commissioners, will remain open all day. The city offices will also be closed.

Those who will ride in carriages, and their order in the procession, follow:

FIRST CARRIAGE—President Roosevelt, Mayor Ira Harris, Dr. W. F. Slocum and Mr. D. B. Fairley.

SECOND CARRIAGE—Mr. M. C. Latta and guests of presidential party.

THIRD CARRIAGE—Assistant Secretary Barnes, Hon. F. E. Brooks, Surgeon General Rixey, Mr. Philip B. Stewart.

FOURTH CARRIAGE—Mr. N. P. Webster, Mr. J. L. McGrew, Dr. Nicolas Murray Butler, Hon. Irving Howbert.

FIFTH CARRIAGE—Governor Peabody, Judge H. G. Lunt, Judge L. W. Cunningham, Mr. J. G. Shields.

SIXTH CARRIAGE—Mr. H. A. Colman, Mr. R. H. Hazard, Mr. Lindsay Denison, Mr. K. R. Babbitt.

SEVENTH CARRIAGE—Mr. R. L. Dunn, Mr. N. Laxernick, Dr. Jas. A. Hart, Judge A. T. Gunnell.

EIGHTH CARRIAGE—Mr. Geo. B. Luckey, Mr. H. A. Strohmeyer, Mr. F. L. Rouse, Hon. J. C. St. John.

NINTH CARRIAGE—Mr. P. W. Williams, Mr. J. P. Gooch, Mr. C. M. MacNeill, Mr. D. V. Donaldson.

TENTH CARRIAGE—Mr. J. R. McKinnie, Mr. Wm. Lennox, Mr. W. S. Jackson, Judge Robt. E. Lewis.

ELEVENTH CARRIAGE—Mr. A. G. Sharp, Mr. Arthur Cornforth, Mr. R. L. Holland, Judge J. A. Orr.

TWELFTH CARRIAGE—Mr. H. L. Chambers, Dr. J. R. Robinson.

THIRTEENTH, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Carriages, Governor Peabody's staff.

The following notice was issued yesterday by Chief of Police King:

"As the pupils of the public schools will be grouped on North Cascade avenue, on both sides of the street, beginning at Platte and extending for two blocks, to St. Vrain, and as this space will be filled with approximately 4,000 school children, the general public and all, with the exception of teachers and those in charge of the children, are requested to keep away. Two officers will be stationed along these blocks to see that the order is complied with. The presence of the public in the territory reserved for the children will interfere with the plans of the schools in the welcome of the children to President Roosevelt.

"V. King, Chief of Police."

The school children will afford one of the most unique features of the reception. Several of the schools have been quietly working on plans that will materialize in startlingly pretty color effects, carried out in the grouping of classes, stars, crescents and other designs have been the object of drills for the past week. Each child will carry a flag, and, as the president passes, these will be waved and the children will unite in cheers.

The trees along these two blocks will be trimmed with red, white and blue bunting. The display of flags and designs carried out in the three colors will be extensive and attractive on the residences on North Cascade.

[illegible] Injunction [illegible] Jerry Johnson Property

A [illegible] injunction was issued yesterday from the district court at Cripple Creek by Judge Lewis restraining Mayhew and Pullen, lessees, and Wider, Eraver and Harrison and Fogelman, sub-lessees, from [illegible] ore on the Jerry Johnson property. The injunction was asked for by the United Mines company on the grounds that the lessees were [illegible] the property without the consent of that company, which owns a interest in the Jerry Johnson company. Shipments aggregating about $14,000, in the hands of the Eagle sampler, were tied up.

The United Mines company claims that the lease under which the property is being worked was granted only by the Jerry Johnson company; that the royalties from the shipments heretofore made by [illegible] have all gone to the Jerry Johnson company, the United [illegible] not having received its proportion according to its [illegible] in the claims.

"EXAM" FOR NEW BUILDING INSPECTOR

[illegible]

Mothers' Auxiliary [illegible]

The Mothers auxiliary of the boys' department, found out the exact amount of provisions required to banquet the members, owing to their experiences in connection with the two functions on Friday and Saturday evenings.

Not only did the boys have, as one of them expressed it, "just all they wanted to eat," but the onlookers, too, enjoyed seeing their happy faces while the feast progressed.

The banquet of Friday night called for three very large boiled hams, 36 pounds of potatoes (escalloped), 18 loaves of bread, five pounds of butter, two gallons of pickles, nine large loaves of cake, six gallons of ice cream and eight gallons of cocoa. The fed more than 100 boys. About half that number enjoyed a similar menu yesterday at 5:30 o'clock.

The women serving were Mrs. H. I. Seldomridge, chairman; Mesdames N. H. Partridge, [illegible] Lennox, F. M. Weathers, W. K. Argo, Misses Trumbour, Allen, Gillet, Crooke, Wise and others. All the afternoon the parents and friends of the boys thronged the rooms and witnessed the sports provided in the gymnasium and swimming pool.

Mrs. Franklin E. Brooks, president of the Mothers auxiliary, presided and made some appropriate remarks, as did Prof. Lancaster, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Day, Prof. Stillwel and Mr. Arnold.

M[illegible] Wage [illegible]

The executive council of Mill and Smeltermen's union No. 125, W. F. M., of Colorado City, was instructed at a meeting of the union held last evening, to again wait upon General Manager Hugh W. Fullerton of the Telluride Reduction company, next Tuesday, and again take up the matter of a new wage schedule to apply at the Telluride mill. The union, after discussing the situation, came to the conclusion that in justice to the management of the Portland mill, which has granted an increased scale of wages, they could not ask a lower scale from Mr. Fullerton. It was the opinion of the meeting that, as nothing will be done in regard to the Standard mill until after May 18, a scale or some definite understanding should be reached with Mr. Fullerton as soon as possible, for the benefit of the union members now working at the Telluride. The committee was instructed to report back to the union Tuesday evening.

The committee met with Mr. Fullerton yesterday. Manager Fullerton stated last evening that he has told the committee that the present condition of the ore market would not justify on his part the increase desired, but that he would appreciate a postponement until May 18.

New [illegible] May [illegible]

Thursday, May 14, is the date selected for the inspection of Companies D and I and the hospital corps of the Colorado National guard. Lieutenant Colonel Davis was yesterday notified by Acting Adjutant Sweeney at Denver, that Lieutenant Colonel W. B. Wheeler of the Tenth Regular infantry would be in Colorado Springs on that date to make the inspection.

The inspection is to be held under government orders for the purpose of giving the necessary [illegible] in equipment. The war department has recently made a change in the equipment and the inspection is held to determine the condition of the armament of the state National guard.

It is expected that about six weeks after the inspection or about the middle of June the local troops will receive new Krag-Jorgenson rifles and other new equipment. The new guns will be used at the maneuvers to be held at Fort D. A. Russel in Wyoming this fall.

Captain A. S. Brooks of the Twenty-ninth infantry and Captain S. P. Adams of the Fourteenth cavalry, will assist Lieutenant Colonel Wheeler in the inspection.

[illegible] German [illegible] The President [illegible] Victoria

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Sharon Springs, Kas., May 2.—President Roosevelt wound up a busy day's work when his train reached this place at 8:30 o'clock tonight. He will remain here until Monday morning, when he will go to Denver and other points in Colorado. While the day has been an extremely busy one it also has been interesting, and the president has enjoyed it greatly. He made many stops and short speeches and was greeted everywhere by large and cheering crowds. At several of the stopping places cadets of the various colleges in the state were at the station to greet the president and several times during the day he devoted his time to speaking of the advantages of agricultural and other education.

The most interesting scene of the day occurred at Victoria, a small place inhabited mostly by Russian-Germans, who still retain a great many of their old customs. Several hundred of these men, women and children were at the station as the train pulled in. The women on one side of the track and the men on the other. The children were with their mothers and when the president appeared on the platform of his car they sang very sweetly the "Red, White and Blue." Then a number of little girls approached the car and handed bouquets to the president. Mr. Roosevelt was much touched at the greeting.

Another interesting scene occurred at Junction City, which is close to Fort Riley. A number of troops were drawn up at the station and a presidential salute was fired as the train approached. Here the president spoke of the splendid record made by Kansas troops in the Spanish war and in the Philippines.

Secretary of War Root spoke of the fine records made by Kansas troops.

Stops also were made during the day at Ellsworth, Chapman, Manhattan, Abilene, Russell, Wakeeny, Dorrance, Salina and Hays.

[illegible] Men [illegible] the Glory of the St. Louis Exposition

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

St. Louis, May 2.—The last act of the dedication exercises was the send up of a huge rocket which broke directly over the towers of the Administration building, scattering its manifold golden stars directly above the archway. The sight was accepted by the multitude as an omen of the glory to come to the fair hereafter and the cheers rolled out again and again before the crowd dispersed.

In many respects the last day of the exercises were the best of them all. The weather was perfect, no wind, no dust, nothing in the air within or without the buildings. In addition the various committees are now thoroughly accustomed to their work and kept everything running smoothly and on time. There were some delays in the civic parade, but that was to be expected. A large number of officers from the regular army were detailed by General Corbin to assist in its formation and management and the effect of their work was plainly manifest. They constantly urged on the laggards, restrained the impetuous and kept the various organizations well closed up, especially while passing the reviewing stand. The parade of today as a pageant was not expected to rival the great military spectacle of Thursday, but in its own sphere it was a feature that it would be difficult to equal.

In the Liberal Arts building the exercises this afternoon took on at times a somewhat informal character. The principal speakers were Governor Dockery of Missouri, and Governor Odell of New York.

Former President Cleveland departed for home this morning at 9 o'clock.

Lieut. General Miles left at 11:35 o'clock for Chicago, where he will spend some time before going to Washington.

The diplomatic corps arranged this morning to start on the return trip to Washington at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and their special train was ready at that time.

FURTHER ROCK SLIDES ARE FEARED AT FRANK

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Frank, N. W. T., May 2.—Practically only those are in Frank today who are detained by the police, engineering or other duties. These are keeping a safe distance from Turtle mountain. No work is being done. All who desired were taken from Frank last night to adjacent towns by a special train chartered by the government. Many believe that even if there should be no further rock slides, the fear of such a recurrence will prevent mining operations at the foot of Turtle mountain and may result in the abandonment of Frank as a town. This would mean great loss, vested interests being estimated at four millions.

[illegible] of the state. From his own and other sources it is said that he has the assurance of a $3,000,000 capital to begin with and proposes to start operations in a very few months. Walker owns about 340,000 acres of timber land in northern California and the primary object of the proposed railroad is to get his timber to market.

It is planned to build mills at intervals along the new line at points now barren of population and to encourage settlement throughout the entire territory through which the road will extend.

EVICTION IN NEW YORK.

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

New York, May 2.—Nearly 500 eviction cases came up in the fourth municipal court yesterday. The evicted tenants told pitiful stories.

The increase in the number of evictions on this May 1 over May 1 last year, is said to be about 100 per cent, and the increase over the number on April 1 of this year about 25 per cent. This state of affairs is partially due to the fact that the tearing away of tenement buildings to make way for the approach to the East river bridge and of others to make way for parks has diminished the dwelling area of this district considerably.

STRIKE IN SAN FRANCISCO.

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

San Francisco, May 2.—About 500 laborers have quit work to enforce a demand for an increase of pay and shorter hours. The strike involves three of the largest contracting firms in the city and is due to the refusal of the contractors to concede the wages and hours agreed on at a conference between committees representing the Builders and Contractors association on one side and the Building Trades Council and the Laborers Protective union on the other.

Fourteen white laborers employed at the Fulton Iron works have been discharged because they objected to the employment of two colored laborers.

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Washington, May 2.—The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, in an answer filed today to an order of the Interstate commerce commission, says that any advances in grain rates which it may have made were only in restoring high rates to a normal basis.

ROOT RETURNING.

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Kansas City, May 2.—A dispatch from Salina, Kas., announces that Secretary of War Root, who was called west by President Roosevelt for consultation on public business, left the president's party this afternoon and started for Columbus, Ohio.

LAUNDRYMEN LOCKED OUT.

(By Associated Press Exclusively to the Gazette in Colorado Springs.)

Portland, Ore., May 2.—Five hundred laundry workers who demanded shorter hours and increased wages, were locked out tonight by the Laundrymen's association.

The dust storms, such as have recently taken place in this city, make it imperative that this fine dirt be removed as far as possible, and that a coarser material, which will not fly so readily, be used.

CRIPPLE CREEK LOOKING UP.

TWO splendid items of news came from Cripple Creek yesterday. One of these was to the effect that the Independence mine under the direction of Superintendent Cornish, had opened up a good pay zone below the 900-foot level. Development shows that the strike is of liberal dimensions, and that part of the ore runs very high. It will be gratifying to know that this great mine in addition to the immense amount of ore which it has already yielded, will continue to be a large shipper at great depth.

Another strike of especial interest to the Cripple Creek end of the district is reported from the property of the Cripple Creek Enterprise company. The streak is said to be twelve inches wide, and runs $100 per ton. The shaft is close to the center of town, and it would be a novel as well as interesting sight to have a good paying property in the heart of the city.

Well known Cripple Creek men are putting the May output as high as 2,000 tons a day, and when the Stratton properties are under lease, they anticipate an additional 500 tons daily. There seems no reason, therefore, why Cripple Creek in 1903, despite numerous drawbacks, should not equal if not surpass the record of the previous year.

THE SIGNBOARD NUISANCE.

THE chiefest detriments to an artistic city are the huge and frequent signboards which meet the eye at every block. Colorado Springs has been endeavoring to do away with these signboards upon real estate which is for sale or for rent. This is certainly a step in the right direction. But these signs are very mild and insignificant in comparison with some of those that meet the vision of the passers-by.

Two of our main traveled highways leading to the two resorts in this section, to Cheyenne Canon and to Manitou, have scores of these immense defacements. One passes by a stretch of pretty little houses with their green lawns and gardens, and the next moment is confronted by a huge structure, perhaps twenty or thirty feet high in the air and a hundred feet long, detailing the virtues of this or that nostrum, of some particular kind of breakfast food, or clothing, or something else.

Many towns and cities have taken decisive action against the signboard nuisance, and have won their cases in the courts. Colorado Springs, whose stock in trade is its scenery and generally attractive appearance, ought to take immediate steps to do away if possible with these inartistic and unsightly structures.

DAMAGE TO COLORADO FRUIT.

AS might have been expected, the storms of the last few days accompanied by the sudden drop in temperature, have been severe upon the fruit crop in nearly all sections of the state east of the main range. In Larimer and Weld counties and in the Arkansas valley, thousands of dollars' worth of damage has been done. The bursting buds were nipped by the frost, and in some instances a total failure will result. The one fortunate circumstance in connection with this situation is that the accompanying rain and snow was so greatly needed that it will compensate in a measure by giving much needed moisture to grains and vegetables.

Colorado weather during April and May is decidedly uncertain. It may seem for a time as though we were in ..., and yet within 48 hours a blizzard will come ... the snow-capped peaks, and endanger all the early ... AN ENDOWMENT OF AN ORCHESTRA.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT is made that of the endowment fund of $750,000 which it is proposed to raise for Thomas' Chicago orchestra, the sum of $410,000 has already been pledged. Influential citizens of Chicago are taking the matter up, and the outlook is tolerably bright although the money is coming a good deal harder than one would expect from such a progressive and wealthy city as Chicago.

Thomas' orchestra is an organization that would be a credit to any city on the continent, and if the people of Chicago are wise in their day and generation, they will not permit it to disband under any circumstances. While it would doubtless be possible to raise the guarantee fund each year, at the same time it makes the existence of the orchestra somewhat precarious and uncertain, and it would be much more satisfactory to all concerned to have a guaranteed fund sufficient to insure the services of this brilliant musical organization for many years to come.

Tammany Hall in New York is now a little more of an oligarchy than ever. Croker used to permit the people of the various election districts of the city to select their own representatives upon the executive committee. The new ruler, Murphy, still permits this, but he has just made a rule that the executive committee is the judge of the qualifications of its members. This particular rule was adopted in order to exclude Devery, but its real effect is to give the executive committee a self-perpetuating organization with power to exclude anybody, whether selected by the voters or not.

A very interesting edition of the Canon City Record has just been issued under the auspices of the women of that city. It is handsomely illustrated, and gives an accurate conception of the growth and prosperity of this thriving town in the Arkansas valley. The paper is nicely printed, and one of its best and most interesting features is a series of articles written by the leading women of that city, describing the resources of Canon and the surrounding country. It is on the whole a very creditable production.

One of the interesting phases of affairs in the city and county of Denver is the fact that some of the officials will claim double salaries. City Attorney Lindsley has rendered an opinion to the effect that he is entitled to a salary as city attorney and to another salary as district attorney. He backs it up by a number of other opinions from Republican and Democratic lawyers. Mr. Lindsley also sustains the claim of Sheriff and Chief of Police Armstrong to the salary of both offices and of various other officials similarly situated.

It is a matter of gratification that the advertising work of the chamber of commerce in California this winter is bearing fruit. It is already known that an exceptionally large number of tourists from the west have remained here for several days, and the reports have it that many others are coming. This simply demonstrates the fact that what is needed to turn people Coloradoward is to invite them to come, and, what is more essential, to treat them properly after they arrive.

BIG BUILDING INCREASE.

That there may be no fear of an immediate slump in the building boom all over the country is shown in the figures for March compiled for the 23 principal cities of the United States by the Construction News for its issue of tomorrow. It shows that there is a gain of 20 per cent. in the general average over the wonderful activity of a year ago. None of the eight largest cities shows a loss.

The gain in Chicago was only six per cent., the value given in the building permits for March being $4,031,500. New York, with a total of $10,875,000, and Philadelphia, with $9,624,000, show larger totals. In Philadelphia, the gain is 62 per cent. Kansas City showed the record gain, 150 per cent., with a total of $1,325,000.

Denver, Washington, St. Paul, Buffalo, Allegheny, Detroit, Seattle and Cincinnati showed decreases. The total value of the building permits for the 23 cities was $37,246,000, against $30,988,000 for the month of March, 1902.—(Chicago Journal.

WHY BORROW TROUBLE?

Dear Sir—In order to settle a bet, will you please state what relation the children of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, if they ever have any, will be to the children of Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt?

Kenosha, Wis. R. Sims.

This column is not intended for the unraveling of snarls. We might say, however, that a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Belmont would be a half sister to the Duchess of Marlborough, and that a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt would also be a half sister to the duchess. It is commonly supposed that two halves make a whole one, therefore it would seem that the little Belmont girl would be a sister to the Vanderbilt child. But let us refrain from borrowing trouble. No serious complications have as yet arisen. If the Belmonts should have a little girl, and the Vanderbilts become the parents of a little boy, and these two unfortunate children should fall in love with each other and desire to marry, there might be some difficulty in connection with the matter of a license. But as we have said, let us pass up the troubles that are non-existent and declare the bets off.—(Record-Herald.

A GRUDGING ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

There is something delightfully British in the reports of the delegation of workingmen brought over here last year by Mr. Alfred Mosely to study American methods and conditions of labor. This appears not only in a disposition to criticize various things American which have no relation to the labor question, but in the effort to keep up the claim of superiority in British workmanship, while admitting that the American workmen put more brains into their work and actually "hanker" for the "latest machinery and the best method." There is no doubt that in many lines there has been a higher development of skill in the older country, but to take that as evidence that the "British workman has nothing to learn from the American workman," while the latter is admitted to be far from certain decided faults of the former, is an inconsistency that nothing but a very fine ... complacency could be blind to. In fact the burden of the ... as they are inadequately summarized in the ... is that in many ways both British employers and ... have a good deal to learn in the way of ... methods. ...that with a great deal of caution," said waitress No. 15. "I shall be thus guarded in my remarks because I think it bad form to give my family affairs away before folks the way most people do when dining and lunching away from home.

"I remember, for instance, the case of the man and woman who couldn't agree to get married on account of their relatives. They sat here for two solid hours talking it over. He had three children which she didn't want to be bothered with, and she had a mother that he didn't want hanging around. Much as they seemed to care for each other, neither would accept the other's incumbrances. The argument waxed pretty hot at times, and they went away still in fighting mood.

"Several months after that the woman came in one day alone. She sat at my table. I was devoured with curiosity and finally, at the risk of losing my place, I spoke to her.

"'It has been a long time since you were here,' I said.

"She was surprised, but she did not get angry.

"'Yes,' she said, 'it has been a long while. I am surprised that you remember me.'

"'Oh, I could never forget you,' I said. 'You were here with a gentleman and you sat here talking about his children and your mother.'

"That was an awfully nervy thing to do, but still she didn't get mad.

"'Yes,' she said, 'I remember that day.'

"She stopped as if that ended it, but she proved to be a true lady with curiosity of her own. That made her sympathetic, and enabled her to appreciate how I suffered under the circumstances, so presently she added: 'We finally fixed it up all right. We rented an extra house across the street and set mother to housekeeping over there to take care of the children. The plan has worked beautifully, and I don't see why all couples with irreconcilable relations do not solve the problem that way.'"—(Philadelphia Ledger.

Only a Fair Proposition.

Admiral "Bob" Evans tells this one: "Among the jackies of the American fleet that did the business at Santiago, was an extremely pious chap, a lad from Vermont. We had been telling him all along that each day would probably witness the long looked-for battle between the American and the Spanish fleet. When he prayed that night he placed special stress upon the plea that the vessel upon which he and his comrades in arms were serving might escape disaster, saying among other things:

"'O Lord, shield us from the shells and other projectiles of the enemy, but if any shells and solid shot do come to our vessel, I pray thee that they may be distributed as prize money is distributed—mostly among the officers.'"—(New York Times.

The Future Made Easy.

There was recently in White Haven, Pa., an up-to-date evangelist, who secured a pot of yellow paint and decorated all the rocks along the Lehigh river with bible texts and admonitions. Among the sentences painted were some rather startling ones. Some distance up the river he discovered a huge rock with a fine, smooth surface, facing a much used road. Across this he painted in foot-high letters:

"What are you going to do after death?"

It was only a week, however, that the rock displayed this alone. For an enterprising advertisement writer came along and painted just below:

"Use Delta Oil—Good for Burns!"

known as his "swing around the circle," the entire country talked about it, and opinion was pretty well divided as to the propriety of the thing, it being known that Johnson's purpose was to attempt to allay in some degree the bitter feeling which had grown out of his reconstruction policy, and which at length culminated in an attempt at impeachment. The idea that the president was at liberty to use the immense prestige of his high office for partisan or personal purposes did not sit well on the average American mind.

The opposition which Johnson encountered in his violation of the proprieties, as they were understood in his day, prevented his immediate successors from following his example. Grant made no trips. Hayes went for a trip to his old home in Ohio, and while there accepted an invitation to visit Detroit, where he made an address. Before returning to Washington he stopped at half a dozen places, making speeches and meeting the people, but all this was an afterthought, and it was not in his mind when he left the White house.

Garfield, during the few months he was in office, was not out of Washington. He was at the Pennsylvania depot one morning in early July, 1881, to take a train for Baltimore, when he fell by the assassin's bullet. Arthur, who succeeded him, left no record of ... which point he returned to Washington by the Ohio route, making frequent stops. On the way west by the northern route he visited Chicago, Milwaukee and the chief cities of Ohio and Indiana. He was away from Washington about three weeks and covered about 2,500 miles.

This one long trip was the only one of consequence made by him as president during either of his terms. He went occasionally on hunting and fishing trips to the rivers and bays near the coast, and within easy reach of Washington, but on these occasions he was invisible to the public and away from the scrutinizing gaze of the correspondents.

President Harrison took up the presidential junket where it had been left off by Cleveland during the latter's first term, and added to it both in the number of miles traveled and in the number and importance of speeches made. One Harrison junket—there was but one of them—was a memorable one in several ways. In the first place, it revealed the president to the country as one of the most eloquent, forceful and tactful short-speech makers of its entire history. The speeches of the Harrison junket were models of style, and their subject matter discloses much of the culture and polish of Harrison's splendid mind. In book form they constitute the most popular volume of his

...he made over the country he was simply the chief executive of a great people, going from place to place, for the purpose of stimulating in the public a loftier patriotism and drawing useful lessons for the nation's present and prospective greatness.

McKinley traveled on his tours more miles than all of his predecessors combined and was seen by more people. No partisanship was displayed in any of these tours, and with that fine tact for which he was distinguished above all of his predecessors he adapted his addresses to the environment in which they were made, and, while not compromising with his conscience, said nothing that would give offense.

Three long tours were made by President McKinley, in addition to scores of minor ones. The first of his long tours was from Washington to Chicago, thence to Minnesota and the Dakotas, and thence back to Washington by way of Kansas City and St. Louis. The second was that remarkable tour of the south, during which he said so many things which served to help men to forget the bitterness growing out of the great civil strife. The third was only partially completed. It was to have included the entire Pacific coast, the journey out by a southerly and the journey back by a northerly route. This tour was abandoned at San Francisco, owing to the sudden and serious illness of Mrs. McKinley.

BISHOP LAWRENCE TO YALE STUDENTS

Bishop William Lawrence of Boston preached in Battell chapel, a few days ago, to the Yale students. He said: "The day for the blind and ignorant—whether in athletics, battle of war or competitions of peace—has passed. Chance is becoming less and less an element in life. The gambling habit is being driven back and back and in its retreat is making a hard fight for its victims. Where it exists the struggle is keen, but it is being eliminated more and more from the great world interests. In the development of scientific surgery and medicine quackery is falling back in hasty retreat.

"Great discoveries are not now happened on by chance as they used to be; they are revealed to those who by patient and exact study are on the border line of the unknown. A biologist, keen and a leader in his work, who is blind to the deeper passions and aspirations of men is thought a man of exact knowledge, not a man of real intelligence. The most skillful operator may be as ignorant of social conditions and large commercial relations as the smallest breaker boy at the mines. Better erroneous convictions, bad convictions, provided they be honest and carefully reached, than no convictions at all. To speak frankly, my friends, I do not believe of the scriptures of Christ or of the future life what I did as a boy, nor do I think that any man who thinks and is in touch with the movements of thought can believe just what he did 10 years ago and in the same way. Yet the world and men are moved by convictions, and I believe that convictions today are deeper and stronger than they ever were. For, in the free and open discussion, deeper problems of life and of religious truth, tradition and inherited faith have had to give way before searching thought and personal experience as long, for instance, as a man is convinced that right is right and truth is truth, he has a sheet anchor to his character. The great question of today is as to whether with the increase of the gigantic body of civilization, the heart of civilization, the spiritual power as expressed in men, are to increase in proportion. Each new invention, each large step in wealth, adds to the potentiality of man, and every step toward a lower standard of morals, social disintegration and the pessimism of the modern superficial philosopher is the battle cry to men to come forth and, possessed with a faith in God's righteousness, carry the fight through to the end.

"Is it not a fact that strength of convictions, earnestness of purpose and a burning faith make a man narrow and unsympathetic with other movements? Do not religion and intolerance naturally go together? Must not a man of convictions fight those who are not of his conviction? There is no doubt that religion and intolerance have often been boon companions and men of earnest purpose have often been narrow. The reason has been that beneath the religion has been a latent skepticism in the truth and beneath the earnestness of purpose timidity of faith. Intolerance is the eternal companion to skepticism. What sort of men have touched most keenly the hearts of men in the past generation? Neither captains of industry nor political leaders nor hard conquerors, only those who have been fired with the spirit of God. Let me close by naming two such types of today's manhood. When General Gordon fell at Khartoum, the world recognized a hero of the faith as of the battle. Again in the last evening of his life, as Robert Louis Stevenson gathered his household together, all unaware that he was near the end, he knelt and prayed: 'Bless us to play the man under affliction. Go with each one of us to rest, and when the day returns return to us our sun and comforter, and call us up with morning faces and morning hearts, eager to labor, eager to be happy, if happiness be our portion. If the day be marked for sorrow, strong to endure it.'"

OPINIONS FROM THE RELIGIOUS PRESS

"If what Captain Mahan says be true," says the New York Churchman (P. E.), "that the Christian world looks with contempt upon the man who is endeavoring to save his own soul, he could offer no better evidence of its growth toward the master's ideal. Would that it were more true. If there were no Christians seeking the salvation of themselves, the selfishness of individualism, the selfishness of parochialism, the selfishness of nationalism would disappear, and the church's power would be supreme. That increasing millions of Christians are learning to lose their lives for the salvation of others gilds with a glow brighter than any former the growing hopes of a glorious cause."

"In physical things there certainly has been an evolution of great and beneficent progress," says the New York Observer (Pres.). "Steeped in this germinating atmosphere, as in a hothouse, theological conceptions, too, have grown like mushrooms into the religion of an evolutionist. Christianity is represented as the lustrous crown jewel upon the brow of man after he has developed from the lowest depths of iniquity to the likeness of spiritual Godhead. It is scarcely necessary to state that such a theory of religion makes no rational place for the scriptural doctrine of blood atonement through Jesus Christ. But, that aside, is Christianity in fact an ideal? When Ezekiel faced Israel his commission read: 'Thou shalt say unto them, thus saith the Lord God,' and that, too, 'whether they will hear or whether they will forbear.' Clearly he had a message of authority and not an ideal to present. So spake all the prophets. Throughout the Old Testament, God is presented as a person, clothed with sovereign power and authority, giving commands and requiring obedience. Nowhere in scripture is there a supremely beautiful ideal in the abstract placed before man with an option to choose its own means of attaining it to godliness; but the command is: 'This is the way, walk ye in it.' John the Baptist cried: 'Repent ye!' And he pointed to the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world, saying that 'He must increase, but I must decrease.'"

"The comfortable feeling of the church has been that just as soon as the requisite majority of presbyteries had voted for revision, the whole matter would be settled and ready to put out of hand. But here comes warning," says the Interior (Pres.) of Chicago, "that the men who have fought the good fight these many years in favor of clear confessionalism do not yet lay their armor down. The Presbyterian—advancing one step farther in its heady campaign of nullification—calls upon the old guard to resist the enactment of the overtures in the approaching assembly, no matter what majority they may have secured in the presbyteries. We accept this as notice that the irreconcilables mean to carry their resistance to Los Angeles. Of course, they are within their constitutional rights; the assembly has lodged with it a discretionary veto of all that the presbyteries have done or will do, yet until now nobody has suggested that the judgment of the church as expressed in the presbyteries ought to have less than commanding and determinative force. For so small a minority to stand up thus flatly to frustrate the intent of so great a majority surely requires a mighty hardihood of nerve, and we trust that they are sustained with much good conscience, for only a conscience so bottomed should risk the moral strain. But the friends of revision can keep the watch awhile longer, and need not keep it in panic, either. All that is needful is that presbyteries supporting the overtures should see that no representative goes with their commission who will vote in assembly to defeat the desire of the church."

"Some inquiry has revealed the fact," says the Watchman (Bapt.) of Boston, "that in many instances these changes of church relationships have been due to a sense of a lack of impressiveness in the services of churches which have not liturgy. The objection is made that the service as a whole is so severely simple and often so ill-arranged, that no depth of impression is made, either upon mind or heart. The attendant on the services ... goes away without a feeling of reverence for the Lord's house or of worship for his majesty and love. The complaint is that what are called services for divine worship are not worshipful. Many who have not felt that this was a sufficient reason for abandoning their Baptist principles will recognize that there is some truth in these criticisms. There is, however, no necessity for bare and rigid services in non-liturgical churches. With care and attention these services may be made as deeply impressive as the most elaborate liturgy, as well as far more effective on the spiritual life. We have in mind Baptist churches whose services are as helpful and inspiring as those in the best conducted churches which use a liturgy, and this without belittling imitation of the services of those churches."

THE SOUTH AND NEGRO EDUCATION

"The most valuable result of this conference for education in the south," said Prof. Edward Mims, of Trinity college, North Carolina, a few days ago to a reporter, "is that it is teaching prominent northern thinkers, writers and speakers that the southerners are themselves working out their own problems in the best way that they can be solved. There is no worse provincialism than that of the educated Bostonian or New Yorker who thinks that the culture, brains and patriotism of the country are confined to the northeastern section. Nothing can so quickly change his point of view as actual contact with southerners in their homes, where they can meet on friendly ground, and each must give the other credit for sincerity and honesty of purpose. Some men who a few years ago thought the north could settle the problems of the south have come to know that the people who are on the ground know best what they have to contend with. They find that they have misunderstood our people and they are frank enough to acknowledge it."

"Dr. Lyman Hall, president of the Georgia Institute of Technology, called attention to the fact that schools are being established all over the south, in which negroes are being trained as scientific farmers, mechanics, weavers, furniture-makers, architects and builders. He made a strong plea for the industrial education of the white boys, who have been almost neglected by the philanthropists, who have poured millions of dollars into colored institutions like Hampton and Tuskegee. He declared that in the south neither racial prejudice nor trade unionism closed the 'door of opportunity' to the negro as they do in some parts of the north, and that the negro worker was better treated in the south than in any other part of the country.

"The negro has been the lion in the path, the present and often the insurmountable obstacle to education in the south," declared Josephus Daniels, editor of the Raleigh, N. C., News and Observer. "The naked truth is that the bulk of the money that has gone to education has been given against the judgment of the southern taxpayer. I must paint the picture as it is—warts, freckles and all. Is it surprising that the white people cried out against being taxed to educate the recently enfranchised negroes while their own children had to work in the field?

"When northern people came to the south to teach the negro and in some cases associated with him on terms of equality, is it any wonder that many southern people believed that the northerners were trying to put the bottom rail on top?

"Yet the southern people, most of them skeptical of the benefits of it, have gone on spending in their poverty millions upon millions in the education of the negro.

"Practically all the southern people believe, with Henry Ward Beecher, that the negro ought to be prepared for the suffrage before he is allowed to vote. The conferring of the ballot upon the ignorant negro was an attempt to make bricks without straw.

"Most of the southern people are opposed to the methods that have been pursued in educating the negro. They know that the uplifting of the negro is a slow process and that giving him book learning does not change his nature. Records in Boston, where the negro is best educated, show that he there furnishes the largest proportion of criminals. But no man is opposed to the industrial education of the negro, and we all applaud Mr. Andrew Carnegie's great gift to Tuskegee Institute.

"The southern people, as a whole, do not believe in the higher education of the great body of the negroes, but they would not close the door of hope to any race, negro, Indian or Filipino."

Mr. Daniels quoted statistics showing that the south, though poor compared with the rest of the country, had done more for the education of an inferior and lately servile race than had any other section or nation in history.

"You told me Jibbs was an accomplished musician. He says he doesn't play any instrument whatever."

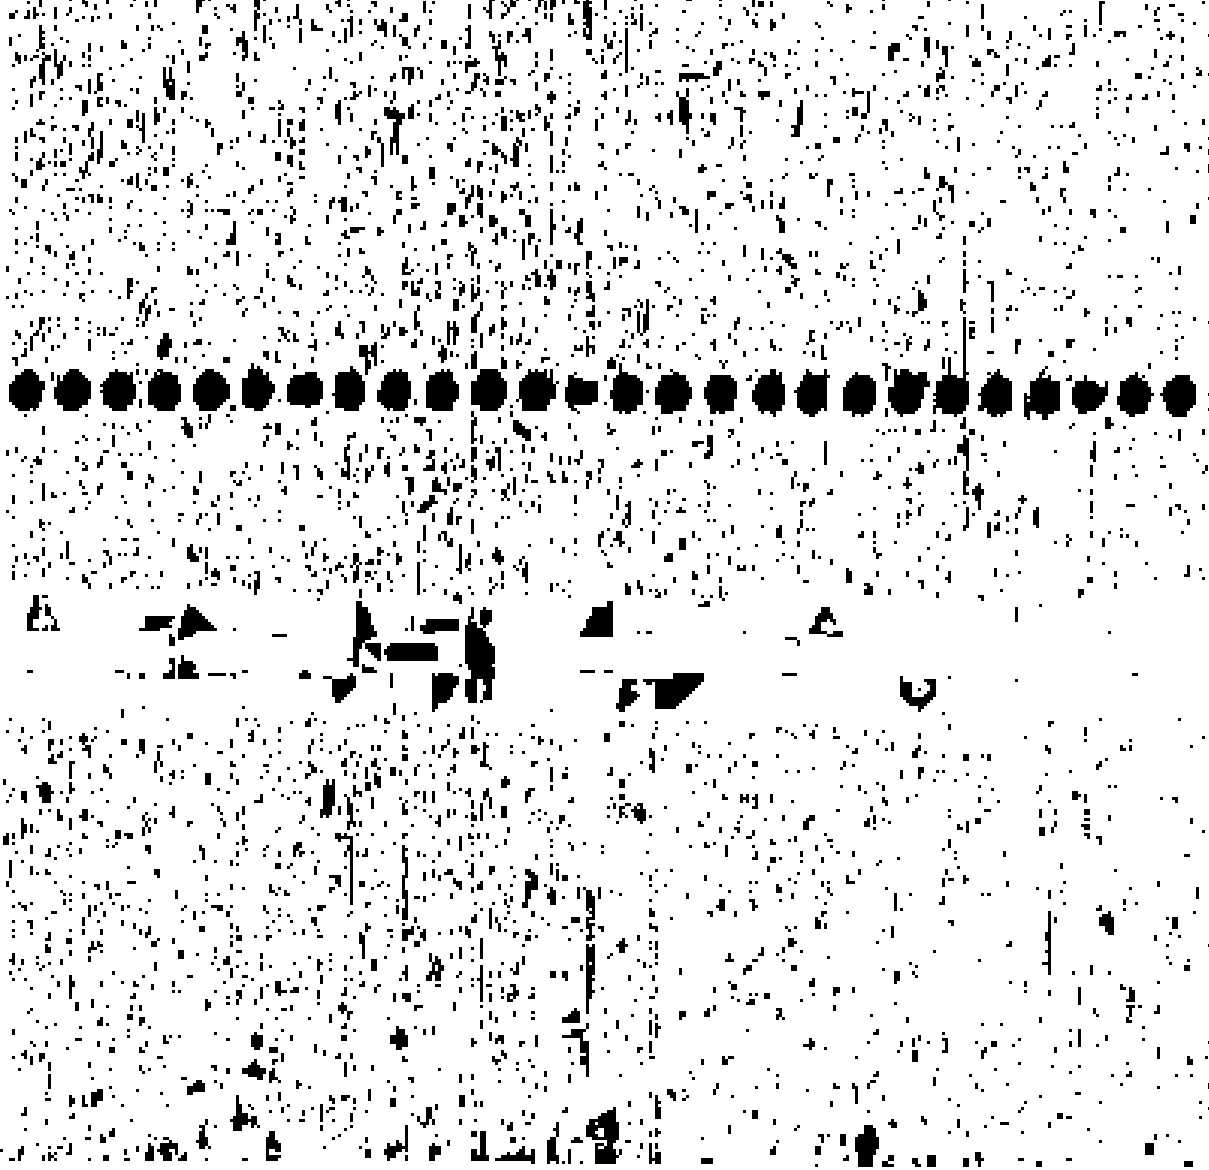

"He's a musician, just the same. He understands music, and can tell good music from bad. Can't a man be a good theologian without being a preacher?"—(Chicago Tribune.

Prof. Cora M. McDonald has accepted the proffer of the chair of English in the University of Denver for the ensuing year and will begin the duties of her new position early in September.

As a lecturer and teacher of English and literature, Miss McDonald has drawn a large and cultured circle of literary people about her. During her four years' residence in the state she has had unusual success with her classes, particularly in Shakespeare and Browning. That Miss McDonald is to leave Colorado Springs is cause for deep regret, for her stay has been of great advantage to many students.

Rapid Growth of Western Cities Causes Work and Annoyance in Postoffice Department

Gazette's Special Washington Letter

Senator Martin of Virginia Mentioned for Chairman of National Democratic Committee.

(Special Correspondence.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 30.—The rapid growth of western cities is giving a great deal of work and worry to officials in the postoffice department. Of the hundred offices at which city free delivery service will be established during the second quarter of 1903, the majority are located in towns west of the Mississippi. It is a daily fact that western cities come into existence with all the modern improvements, electric lights, pavements, sidewalks, numbered houses, etc., and have no difficulty in securing complete postal service, while many eastern cities decades older are not provided with the improved conveniences, for the reason that their streets are as ill-kept and unkept as when they were nothing more than village lanes. The great obstacle to efficient free delivery service in many western towns has been the inability to obtain men to act as mail carriers. Quite recently the postmaster at El Paso, Tex., wrote to the first assistant postmaster general at Washington that his carriers could not take their annual vacation because he had no substitute carriers on his rolls. He was instructing to find suitable men among the citizens of his city and appoint them as letter carriers temporarily, in order that his regular carriers might not be deprived of the leave of absence to which, under the rules of the postal service, they were entitled. The El Paso postmaster lost no time in replying that it was impossible to obtain temporary employes of any character, that "El Paso is on the crest of the wave of prosperity, and there are no idle young men in the city." Unfortunately, for the free delivery service in the west, the salaries offered to mail carriers do not compare favorably with what may be earned by able-bodied men in private employ.

UNIQUE STORY.

Under the clever title of "Milliner to a Mouse," Mr. G. S. Hopkins, a former resident of Colorado, has written a story of Washington life that affords much instruction as well as amusement. The love tale is merely the thread on which he has strung a half dozen or more pen portraits of the types that go to make up the startling society of the national capital. He is not always kind, yet even his sarcasm is gentle. His picture of the newly arrived member from the woods, and his sketch of the department clerk kotowing for invitations to fashionable houses while he frequents the cheapest restaurants in order that his credit with the best tailor in town may not suffer, are delightfully real. Mr. Hopkins says that the object of the book is to make Americans proud of their capital, and his description of the avenues and squares, the fine old houses, and their finer occupants, must surely accomplish a little of the author's desire.

TWO CABINET MEMBERS.

Probably the two cabinet officers who stand nearest to the western two-thirds of the United States are the secretary of the interior and the secretary of agriculture. Hon. James Wilson has been spoken of by those who know as the best agricultural secretary who has yet filled that office. His methods are best described by a hint as to his way of working. He simply takes off his coat, takes hold and doesn't let go until he has accomplished everything he has undertaken. His latest hobby is the statistics of exports and imports, which his friend and colleague, the secretary of the treasury, collects and tabulates for the mystification of the public. These figures, so mean ingless to the average Philistine, are full of sweet possibilities to the Hon. James Wilson. If they show that any other country is exporting better potatoes, or raising more sugar beets than come out of the Rocky Mountain region, there is a special agent in Colorado or Utah making most aggressive inquiries before a week has passed. Recently Mr. Wilson discovered that Holland sent to this country annually tulip and hyacinth bulbs valued at over $ 000,000. After rapid interviews with the weather bureau and the soils division, an experiment with these bulbs was made in the northwestern part of the state of Washington. It is anticipated that Holland will shortly tremble for her tulip trade. This is only an instance of the secretary's prompt action in endeavoring to increase and diversify the production of the country.

YOUNGEST HOUSEHOLDER.

The youngest householder in the capital is Master Walker Blaine Beale, and the property which has recently been deeded to him by his father is the famous Decatur house on Lafayette square. Its construction followed that of the White house, which was the first house built on the square. It was built in 1819 by Commodore Decatur. It was in this house, stupid enough on the exterior, that the commodore gave the famous party to Mrs. Gouverneur, the daughter of President Monroe, and it was from its doors that he walked the next morning to fight the duel near Bladensburg, in which he was mortally wounded, his opponent being Commodore James Barron, and it was in this house he died the evening of the day of the encounter. Since then it has been successively the Russian embassy, the home of Henry Clay and Martin Van Buren, Edward Livingston, Sir Charles Vaughan, the British minister, and Baron Hyde de Neuville, and last by General Edw. Fitzgerald Beale, from whom it has come to his grandson.

THE NEW CHINESE MINISTER.

The new Chinese minister to the United States not only intends representing his country in a diplomatic capacity, but as a promoter of education. He has brought with him to Washington a score or more of young men or boys who will learn our language, institutions and methods, and will go back to the orient to become part of "Young China." Later more young men will come, and they in turn will take a hand in leavening the lump of celestial stagnation with the essence of progress.

The new minister thinks it a great drawback to the Chinese in this country that they do not all understand the English language, and an equal drawback to Americans in China that they do not understand the Chinese language. He is going to do his part towards supplying a remedy, and will urge all of his people in the United States not only to learn our language, but to study our business methods and institutions. Closer commercial relations between China and the United States will follow, and Sir Chen-tung Liang Cheng believes both countries will be materially benefited.

TIMBER FOR DEMOCRATIC CHAIRMAN.

United States Senator Thomas S. Martin of Virginia is mentioned as an available man for chairman of the national Democratic committee in the next presidential campaign. Senator Martin is a close personal friend of Senator Gorman, and is somewhat of the same type of man, not only in looks but in methods of work in political matters. He is energetic, courteous, earnest and able. He is conservative, though an ardent Democrat. In a recent interview Senator Martin declared that the tariff would be the leading issue in the next campaign, but that the Democrats should advocate a conservative revision, "one that would not disturb and alarm the substantial business and manufacturing interests of the country." He said that what is known as the "Iowa idea" seemed to meet the requirements. If Senator Martin is made chairman of the national committee, he will, with Senator Gorman at his elbow, conduct a campaign which will be certain to cause the Republican leaders to do some tall hustling to keep their party.

THE MONITOR WYOMING.

Senator Warren of Wyoming is making a determined effort to have the monitor Wyoming rechristened, and his attempt is with the approval of the secretary of the navy. It is not long since the Wyoming was launched, but even at the time of her construction she had proved into a type of war vessels that is looked upon as obsolete, and is rapidly disappearing from the navies of the great powers. Such craft are almost useless in general warfare, their only utility being in defending harbors. Sampson, after his campaign in Cuban waters during the Spanish-American war, pronounced them very inefficient. They are too slow-going to keep up with a fleet, and they furnish so poor a foundation for their immense guns that in heavy swells they are nearly useless. Congress has a weakness for monitors because they are an American invention, but the idea that we need only defensive armament in using ground, so what is the monitor Wyoming cost nearly a million dollars, she is not looked upon as a success, and the senator from the state for which she is named is trying to have her rechristened. At the same time he does not want Wyoming to be entirely unrepresented in the navy, and so he has started the ball rolling for a new battleship that shall be named for his state. As he is most persistent when he goes after anything, it is very probable that one of the four new battleships will be christened by one of Wyoming's daughters, though the senator will have to persuade congress to pass a bill relieving the unhappy monitor of her present title and giving her a new name first.

TEA CULTURE IN AMERICA.

The tea culture which has recently been introduced in this country, and in which western people are particularly interested as an experiment which will owe much of its success to irrigation, owes its introduction to Dr. Edward Bedloe of Philadelphia. Dr. Bedloe has been consul at Canton and other of the eastern cities, and is a world-wide traveler. He is at present much interested in the raw silk industry, and is eagerly watching for an opening by which he may induce capitalists to promote the industry in this country. He says, "We import over $80,000,000 of raw silk every year which might just as well be raised in the middle and southern states. The labor is lighter than sewing or gardening, and is admirably suited to women and children. It requires little time and no costly apparatus. For the exertion required it would pay better than any other industry. If established on a large scale, it would give employment to over half a million people paying each at least a couple of hundred dollars a year. Best of all, the time consumed would not interfere with any other work, and so the revenue derived would be velvet. As to the tea industry, Dr. Shepard, to whom I sent seed from Formosa, has demonstrated in South Carolina that our country can produce the best tea, and there is a big stretch of country in which it can be properly grown."

The Shocking Conduct of Job Hominy

From the Amorous Vicissitudes of Silver Sam

(Copyright, 1903, by Frank H. Spearman.)

NOTHING new or dramatic was ever done in the line of trick that was not played on Job Hominy. Job was living in a greenhouse in his back lot on Gilson road when the thing happened that made him the most valuable museum freak in the country. He had part of the framework up and was standing on a box of glass with a long iron rod in his hand when his wife called to him from the house.

"Job," said she, "there's an awful storm coming up. You come right in before you get that new shirt wet."

Job looked up at the black and white clouds overhead and set his jaws in that contrary way of his.

"I'm willing to take off the shirt," he said, "but I'll be drafted if I come in till I get good and ready!"

Just then a big, purple bolt of lightning shot out of the clouds and ran down the long iron rod into Job's lanky body, filling him chockful of the business electricity that could be manufactured on so short a notice.

"Mercy me," shrieked Mrs. Hominy, "it's a judgment on Job for swearing that way! I hope it didn't burn that new shirt!" and she ran out to see if he was hurt.

But he wasn't. Barring a little scorched place on both hands, where the current had come in, he hadn't been harmed a particle, that is, so far as anybody could see. He just stood stock still for a little bit, sort of stunned, you know, then he batted his eyes real hard, found out he was still alive, and said:

"By Jinks, it never touched me!"

He dropped the iron rod and got down off the box of glass. His wife ran up and put her hands on his shoulders, but that's as far as she got. Her arms were nearly jerked from their sockets and she jumped back with a scream that brought out all the neighbors. Job's little daughter came running to him and he started to take her up. She screamed the minute he touched her and fell on the ground, flopping like a chicken with its head cut off. A little puppy he had just begun to train sprang up against his leg, jumped about four feet in the air with a howl of pain and fell dead.

Job was just a human storage battery, that's all. Standing on all that glass he had been insulated and kept the whole bolt of electricity in his body. He was brimming full of it from head to foot and it wasn't safe to go near him, much less touch him.

At first it was mighty inconvenient. His wife had to stand on a glass plate to kiss him, the bed had to be put on insulators, he had to wear rubber gloves to shake hands, and there wasn't an hour of the day that you couldn't get a blue spark out of him if you should happen to want one.

And he never got over it, even to the day of his death. He was not only a 170-pound storage battery, but a human accumulator as well. His whole system had undergone some kind of a change and he just naturally absorbed electricity out of the earth and the air, and, no matter how hard he tried, he couldn't empty himself of it.

It wasn't until after he'd shocked his family and the neighbors over and over that it was found out what a handy thing had happened to him after all. An electric light socket got out of whack in his house and a man came to fix it. While he had the bulb out he handed it to Job to hold and Job happened to put his two thumbs on the connections. The light lit right up and glowed bright as day. Just then Mrs. Hominy came into the room and it was all over with Job.

"Well, if that ain't nice!" she said. "Young man, you just go right back and tell the electric light people to take out their wire."

"Take out their wire!" said Job. "Why, what for?"

"What for Job Hominy! Well, you are dumb. Why, from now on you'll stay in the house every evening and be of some use to your family. Well just hitch the wires to you and have all the light we want."

At first Job was rather tickled with the idea and he had a lot of trade made right away. He had an electric lantern for use about the barn that was lit the minute he picked it up and went out as quick as he let go of it; he had a light bulb let into the front of his hat and used it to read by as he came home in the dim street cars, and he had one made into a reading cap at home. He got a motor for the corn sheller and the feed chopper and, for a time, he was tickled to death with his own handiness.

But Mrs. Hominy took that out of him. She was a woman who knew a good thing when she saw it and she lost no time getting her money's worth out of Job. It was all right to hitch the wires to him the minute he came to supper and set him right to work to lighting up the house and furnishing the power for an electric heater and cooker, when she got a motor for the sewing machine and the washing machine and kept him at home every minute that he wasn't working to run the different contraptions she had around the house, he began to get tired of it; but when she put a rocking attachment to the cradle and began to take current from him even while he slept he raised such a rumpus that Mrs. Hominy drove him out of the house at 11 o'clock at night.

Job didn't come back. He was so tearing mad that as he went down the street, a steady stream of blue sparks trailed out behind him and a stranger, standing in front of the hotel with Sam Feeder, the proprietor, naturally wanted to know what it all meant.

"Why, what's the matter?" he asked.

"Why, that's Job Hominy, the human storage battery, and he's raising mad, that's all," said Sam. "I'll call him back and introduce you."

"Do," said the stranger.

"Oh, Job!" called Sam, "come back here and shake hands with my particular friend, Mr. Mr.——"

"Goldheimer," whispered the stranger. "Julius Goldheimer."

"My particular friend, Mr. Goldheimer," said Sam, and he tipped Job the wink. "Shake hands with him."

Well, Job was out of humor anyhow, so he shook hands hareheaded with the stranger. Mr. Goldheimer went up in the air and swore in four dialects.

"You'll do," he yelled as he got his hand loose and run his fingers through his hair to give it a chance to curl up evenly again. "I'll give you a thousand dollars a week and expenses to make my museum circuit."

"A thousand dollars a week!" gasped Job.

"Sure! A thousand dollars a week—on the bills, and a hundred of it in real money. You're worth it."

"Oh," said Job. "Is that the way it's done?"

"Sure!" said Mr. Goldheimer, "and understand you get the hundred. Every Monday."

"And you pay all the expenses."

"Sure! I pay all the expenses except the hotel bills and railroad fare."

"Oh," said Job. "Is that the way it is it's done?"

"Sure!" said Mr. Goldheimer. "Just come inside and we'll fix up the contract."

So Job became a thousand dollar a week attraction. He learned to wear a turn-over stand-up collar every day and to go around with his shoes shined all the time. He got him an electric automobile and run it with his own power, and cut a big splurge for about a year.

But the museum business proved to be his ruin. He got so plain because he was the most dangerous man in the world and he cultivated the nasty temper that he had never dared to show while he was living with Mrs. Hominy. He got to be known as the meanest man on the circuit and the other freaks hated him. It was his habit, when I was first introduced to them, to always shake hands and give them a shock that nearly raised them off the floor. It was a bad thing for most of them. The fat lady lost 27 pounds after shaking hands with him, and the ossified man began to chip off at a terrible rate the day he met him. The Circassian beauty's own hair rose up so straight that she couldn't keep her bushy wig on, and the tattooed man's steel-filings all peeled off. It was just cussed mean now, but it was his way of joking and he enjoyed it a heap. Fully three-fourths of the jokes in the world are on the principle.

It was the India Rubber man who finally tooted the whistle for Job. He was, of course, electricity proof and when Job shook hands with him nothing happened. It was a terrible annoyance to Job and when the India Rubber man found it out and heard of Job's record from the other freaks he just spoiled a big job rubbing it in.

You see, Job made an announcement from his platform, at every performance that he'd give $5 to any man who could shake hands with him and not squirm. Lots of people tried it but they never earned the money, though they made lots of fun for the crowd. The trick made Job the most popular, with the public of any freak in the museum business, so the India Rubber man threw the kibosh into it. Just about the time Job would make this offer the India Rubber man would stroll up in his street clothes, looking like any other man, and insist on shaking hands. He'd stand there and hold Job's hand for a long time, chuckling on a way that made Job's blood boil, then demand his $5. Job used to nearly wear himself out trying to shock that man, throwing all his force into the handshake, but it did no good. The longer this went on the wilder Job got, and he finally had to cut out the trick. He hated the India Rubberman so hard that he'd go to bed and dream about strangling him or something of that sort, and when a man reaches that point he needs a keeper.

One day Job's chance came. The India Rubber man cut his hands, and the minute Job saw the blood it flashed across him that it was only the man's skin that was electricity proof. With a roar like a hyena he sprang at the India Rubber man, flashing sparks all over him, and the two went to the floor. Over and over they rolled, Job with both the India Rubber man's hands locked tightly in his own and a steady stream of blue sparks flying in every direction. There was a strong smell of burning rubber and when Job finally let go the India Rubber man rolled over dead.

The manager of the museum telephoned for the police but, when they saw one grab at Job was enough for them and Job was left alone in his glory, running amuck in the place, a raving wild man and boasting that no regiment of police could take him. The sergeant of police, however, got him under up and telephoned for four policemen in rubber diving suits, and when they arrived it was all over with Job. They threw him into jail and the iron sapped his electricity away to a considerable extent, though it made it uncomfortable for the other prisoners in his row. When they brought him out for trial the bailiff wore a mackintosh and rubber gloves but they were hardly necessary.

The trial was short. They proved that this electric city was a sort of concealed weapon and that Job was a dangerous man to be allowed to live. He got murder in the first degree.

When they want to electrocute him the electrician put on just about four times the current and shot it into Job. Job just drew a long breath and smiled. He had been drafted of electricity so long that he was weak and this bolt was only like a drink of whisky to him. The electrician doubled the current and gave him another dose. Job only straightened up in his chair and closed his eyes in ecstacy. The electrician turned on all the power he had and poured it into Job. A stream of sparks began to shoot from him but that was all. It never fazed him. The electrician was puzzled and so was aggravated, too. He studied a long time and then a happy idea struck him.

"I'll be dinged if I don't fix you this time!" he said, and he went out and started the machine backwards.

That finished Job!

When they laid him out in his coffin he was as dry of electricity as an old gum shoe, but by the time he got home to his widow he had accumulated until they had to put glass handles on his coffin to protect the pallbearers.

Mrs. Hominy was a sensible-minded woman and she couldn't see any use in wasting Job, so she had him buried under the house and run wires down to him. Job lighted the place and run the sewing and washing machines and other contraptions for nearly three years after that. But one day the widow got married and I guess it riled up Job's ghost so that he got his wires crossed or something like that. Anyway the house burned down the night o' the wedding and the widow sold the lot and moved away. She left Job behind her and she went and people don't set set around that set much after night, now.

Job's Tragic Sale of $10,000 Chairs

When Steamboats Sailed Up Second Street

(Copyright, 1903, by Frank H. Spearman.)

IN HIS bidding yesterday the third day of the sale—for articles in the curious collection of antiquities at the Fourth regiment armory was full of striking incidents, says the Baltimore Sun, which kept the crowd in attendance in a state of excitement, and one lot brought prices that got everybody on his feet, and when the competition among the bidders finally stopped at $8,000 for the lot, great cheering and applause ensued, and a scene extraordinary for an auction room was presented.

The successful bidder was Mr. C. H. Pond of New York, the dealer who attracted a sensation at the first day's sale by his bold bidding for the Chippendale chairs, also in the first lot. His bid of $4,000 secured on that day was a single set of Chippendale, of course, and the $8,000 bid, raised for which he paid on the day in order was his bid for a second set of six chairs of the same kind.

The first lot he purchased on private sale was the Chippendale chairs in the Francis Scott Key collection, which he paid $3,000 on a bid of $2,000 per piece. To the eye of the ordinary observer these chairs seem to be simply chairs, only that and nothing more. They were a part in Baltimore of social life when the Star Spangled Banner was the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and to the student of history and of social life they are a thing of great interest and not a little value. But there they stood, and that made a difference to those who bid, say.

Yesterday, early in the day, Mr. Pond bought a single chair, which was the Chippendale chair that was in the Francis Scott Key collection, for $1,000. To the eye of the ordinary observer it was to be simply a chair, only that and nothing more. They were a part in Baltimore of social life when the Star Spangled Banner was the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and to the student of history and of social life they are a thing of great interest and not a little value. But there they stood, and that made a difference to those who bid, say.

O. A. Kirkland, the auctioneer, sat down on the platform in an ordinary pine chair, some little distance back of the celebrities. He gazed for a few minutes quietly and calmly at the lot.

"These are the Key chairs," he remarked in a low tone, as though telling himself a choice secret. "These are the Key chairs, the Key chairs, the Key chairs," in slightly louder accents.

Still, in the same sepulchral tones, he continued:

"This is lot 774"—reading from the catalogue in a sing-song fashion, and with the most melancholy inflection—"Eight fine arm chairs, once owned by Francis Scott Key, of Star-Spangled Banner fame. One of the handsomest and most delicately carved chairs ever created by Chippendale. Only 12 of these chairs were brought to this country."

Remaining seated, he casually asked the company if anybody wished to bid. Somebody yelled. If the set was to be sold as a whole or in individual pieces, and Mr. Willis offered $5,000 for the lot. This was not considered, and after a slight discussion it was declared that the bidding should be by the piece, purchasers to save the privilege of bidding lots of two, four, six or eight pieces, but not one, three, five or seven.

That matter settled, bids were asked for. "Fund and swanky thaier," a German near the front offered, and at the same moment Mr. Kirkland caught the offer of $2.

"What, spiece?" the German questioned, dropping into English.

"Three hundred dollars apiece, of course," fired Mr. Kirkland.

I don't see why, of course," grumbled the first bidder.

From $300 to $500 the bid jumped quickly, and by this time Mr. Kirkland was on his feet, beginning to take notice again, after his period of suspended animation. He gesticulated with right hand, then left hand, as though moved by invisible clockwork, as the bids from one quarter were quickly followed by an increase from the other side.

A group of Baltimore dealers occupied the foreground to the left of the auctioneer, and way far to the background the opposing force in the person of Mr. Pond held his ground.

"Seven hundred dollars! Do I hear $725?" came in sweetly alluring tones from the auctioneer. "Fifty! Seventy-five! Eighty! Hundred! Gentlemen, do you say eight-fifty? Nine hundred? Twenty-five, fifty, one thousand!"

The $1,000 Point Rounds

Mr. Kirkland's arms had been moving like a rapidly-moving see-saw in response to the quick succession of bids, the gentleman in the rear going one better than his competitors at every turn. When he rounded the $1,000 point the director of the sale paused. The assemblage of society folk, curio hunters, dealers and connoisseurs had grown more and more interested at each stage in the contest.

At this point half of the people who were occupying the chairs in the upper part of the hall stood up and turned around to have a look at the intrepid bidder in the rear of the hall. The gentleman in question—a white-haired, wall-knit figure, slightly above medium height, in a dark, invisible plaid business suit—stood there cool and unruffled, apparently. His coat was thrown back, showing a wide expanse of light-gray waistcoat and giving a glimpse of immaculate linen and black tie. His hat, like his waistcoat, was of a very pale shade of gray—almost white—and the only evidence of excitement in his appearance was indicated by the position of his head covering, which had been pushed back about an inch, as it could be possible for a piece of headgear to go and yet not fall off. The almost open-mouthed staring of the assembling appeared to embarrass him slightly, and he seemed relieved when the ordeal was over.

But the sale had not been completed yet and after a sufficient interval had been granted for the section of the gentleman who was willing to give $1,000 apiece for plain, ordinary chairs, "Joe" Winkler and the rest of Mr. Kirkland's right-hand guard brought order out of chaos by politely, but firmly, requesting the gentlemen and ladies who were standing to sit down and compose themselves.

A Pause; Then Applause.

The news that it was going against the group of dealers to the left was broken to them gently.

"Gentlemen, it's against this little combination here, a nice combination, too," Mr. Kirkland explained, sympathetically. "You may have 60 seconds for reflection."

A solemn pause during the time agreed upon followed, broken only by the remarks of an interested spectator: "No use in going against your friend Pierpont in the pear."

As the "nice little combination to the left" evidently felt so likewise, no response was made to the auctioneer's request at the close of the promised 10 seconds for reflection for something over $1,000.

"It goes to you, Mr. Pond," said Mr. Kirkland, and the question "How many?" that followed was the answer in a few by the entire lot from the gentleman in the rear.

A storm of applause and cheers followed the announcement and somebody near the desk at which the clerks sat with their big books in front of them, in which they recorded the sales, proposed that "The Star-Spangled Banner" be sung, but nobody had courage to start it.

It was rumored that Mr. Pond was buying for some of the Goulds, but he refused to disclose the name of the person for whom he was acting.

After the sale was completed he was surrounded by a crowd of men, who shook hands with him and congratulated him and asked questions. He acknowledged that $1,000 apiece had not been his limit and that he had been instructed to get the chairs at any price. He said that, apart from any historic interest which the chairs might possess, a complete set of old Chippendales was such a rarity that it was worth almost anything that might be asked for it.

TREASURE FOR $07 BODY.

Season Ticket to the World's Fair to the Person Who Catches a Wild Balloon.

A curious feature of the fireworks program during the dedicatory ceremonies at the World's fair, St. Louis, will be the release of a large balloon made of the finest and lightest oil silk, and filled with the best quality of hydrogen. To this balloon will be attached, under proper safeguards to prevent injury, a notice directed to the finder that on return of the notice to the exposition officials a season pass to the fair will be given. It is estimated that the balloon, under moderately favorable conditions will travel a thousand miles before returning to earth. It is likely that much interest will be displayed on the night of the balloon's release as to the direction of the wind and that localities in the fortunate direction will be on the lookout for the treasure laden passenger.

Destruction caused by the present floods recalls times when high water was not confined to districts below the city, but when the levee here was flooded, and when the boats found no difficulty in landing their cargoes at the foot of the various streets. Memorable are the great floods of 1844 and 1858 in which the river reached the highest stages ever known here.

The high water of 1858 is especially well remembered here, and probably the only photo which exists of the levee at that period is now in the possession of Emil Critchlo, the barber at No. 126 Olive street, who has occupied that site, or one immediately opposite, for more than 45 years. In the course of the great flood in '58, Mr. Cherle took one of the few photos of the levee.

At that time the water in the local channel measured 36 feet nine inches, the highest, with but one exception, ever recorded here. Boats came directly to the streets to land their cargo, and some were able to swing their gangways across to the front windows of buildings along the levee, thus discharging freight directly into the warehouses.

One boat was actually able to proceed a few feet up Olive street, her gang plank extending half way up to what is now Main street. The first floors of all the buildings along the river front were flooded, the water standing three feet deep in most of them.

There was no trestle in those days, and the high water enabled the boats to come close up to the foot of the streets. The wharfboats could be dispensed with altogether, if necessary, although many steamers preferred to discharge their freight on the wharfboats, the goods being thence carried across on temporary bridges.

Photography was not at a high stage of development in those days, and the amateur photographer was almost unknown. Mr. Cherle was probably the only follower of the amusement in the city.

As an illustration of the difficulties under which the picture taker of those days labored, it may be mentioned that he had to construct all his own appliances for developing and printing, such articles being then manufactured only by the professional daguerreotypers for their own use.

He was unable to secure glass of large enough size to take a satisfactory photo. He took the photograph from a point a little below Pine street, the foremost boat in the picture being broadside to the foot of that thoroughfare.

As a comparison with other floods, it may be mentioned that the great rise of 1844 gave a depth of 41 feet six inches in cannel at the foot of Market street. The flood of 1858, showed 36 feet nine inches, and the flood of 1851 showed 38 feet six inches. In 1892 the river rose to 33 feet four inches, while the flood of 1892 came fairly close to this latter figure, reaching 25 feet.

As a relic of the past, the photograph which hangs in Mr. Cherle's salon is still perfectly clear in all its details.—St. Louis Republic.

A letter from the New Jersey commission states that the additional appropriation of $50,000 asked for has been granted by the legislature. As $40,000 had been voted by the preceding legislature, New Jersey will have $ 0,000 to spend on a state exhibit at the World's fair.

"As likely as not he never kept one," said Allardyce. "Things are pretty slack aboard a South African trader."

"I should like to take all these books and papers," said I. "Ask the carpenter how much time we have."

His report was reassuring. The vessel was full of water, but some of the cargo was buoyant, and there was no immediate danger of her sinking. Probably she would never sink, but would drift about as one of those terrible unmarked reefs which have sent so many stout vessels to the bottom.

But it was not to the box that my eyes or my thoughts were turned as I entered the stateroom. On the floor, lying across the litter of bunting, there was stretched a small, dark man with a short curled beard. He lay as far as it was possible from the box, with his feet toward it and his head away. A crimson patch was printed upon the white canvas on which his head was resting, and little red ribbons wreathed themselves round his swarthy neck and trailed away onto the floor, but there was no sign of a wound that I could see, and his face was as placid as that of a sleeping child.

It was only when I stooped that I could perceive his injury, and then I turned away with an exclamation of horror. He had been pole-axed, apparently by some person standing behind him. A frightful blow had smashed in the top of his head and penetrated deeply into his brain. His face might well be placid, for death must have been absolutely instantaneous, and the position of the wound showed that he could never have seen the person who had inflicted it.

"You are quite right, Mr. Allardyce," said I. "The man has been murdered—struck down from above by a sharp and heavy weapon. But who your going below, Mr. Allardyce," said I. "See what you can make of her, and find out how much of her cargo may be saved. I'll look through these papers while you are gone."

"What's her flag?" I asked.

The bills of lading and some notes and letters which lay upon the desk sufficed to inform me that the Brazilian brig Nossa Senhora da Vittoria had cleared from Bahia a month before. The name of the captain was Texeira. She was bound for London, and a glance at the bills of lading was sufficient to show me that we were not likely to profit much in the way of salvage. Her cargo consisted of nuts, ginger, and logs of valuable tropical growths. As I turned over the papers, I came upon a short note in English which arrested my attention.

"It is requested," said the note, "that the various old Spanish and Indian curiosities, which came out of the Santarem collection, and which are consigned to Prontfoot and Neuman of Oxford street, London, should be put in some place where there may be no danger of these valuable and unique articles being injured or tampered with. This applies most particularly to the treasure chest of Don Ramirez di Leyra, which must on no account be placed where anyone can get at it."

The treasure chest of Don Ramirez! Unique and valuable articles. Here was a chance of salvage after all! I had risen to my feet with the paper in my hand, when my Scotch mate appeared in the doorway.

"I'm thinking all isn't quite as it should be aboard of this ship, sir," said he. He was a hard-faced man, and yet I could see that he had been startled.

"What's the matter?"

"Murder's the matter, sir. There's a man here with his brains beaten out."

"Killed in the storm?" said I.

"Maybe so, sir. But I'll be surprised if you think so after you have seen him."

"Where is he, then?"

"This way, sir; here in the main deck house."

There appeared to have been no accommodation below in the brig, for ... [illegible] was he and why did they murder him?"

"He was a common seaman, sir," said the mate. "You can see that if you look at his fingers."

He turned out his pockets as he spoke and brought to light a pack of cards, some tarred string and a bundle of Brazilian tobacco.

"Hullo, look at this!" said he.

It was a large, open knife, with a stiff spring blade, which he had picked up from the floor. The steel was shining and bright, so that we could not associate it with the crime, and yet the dead man apparently had held it in his hand when he was struck down, for it still lay within his grasp.

"It looks to me, sir, as if he knew he was in danger, and kept his knife handy," said the mate. "However, we can't help the poor beggar now. I can't make out these things that are lashed to the wall. They seem to be idols and weapons and curios of all sorts done up in old sacking."

"That's right," said I. "They are the only things of value that we are likely to get from the cargo. Hail the bark and tell them to send the other quarter boat to help us to get the stuff aboard."

While he was away I examined this curious plunder which had come into our possession. The curiosities were so wrapped up that I could only form a general idea as to their nature, but the striped box stood in a good light, where I could thoroughly examine it. On the lid, which was clamped and cornered with metal work, there was engraved a complex coat of arms, and beneath it was a line of Spanish, which I was able to decipher as meaning:

"The treasure chest of Don Ramirez di Leyra, knight of the Order of St. James, Governor and Captain General of Terra Firma and of the Province of Veraquas."

In one corner was the date 1606 and on the front a large white label, upon which was written in English, "You are earnestly requested upon no account to open this box." The same warning was repeated underneath in Spanish. As to the lock, it was a complex and heavy one of engraved steel, with a Latin motto which was above a seaman's comprehension.

By the time I had finished this examination of the peculiar box, the other quarter boat with Mr. Armstrong, the first officer, had come alongside, and we began to carry out and place in her the various curiosities which appeared to be the only objects worth taking from the derelict. When she was full I sent her back to the bark, and then Allardyce and I with the carpenter and one seaman ... [illegible] ... at the only thing ... lowered it over, ... the two middle ... for it was so heavy that it would have given the boat a dangerous tilt had we placed it at either end. As to the dead man, we left him where we had found him.

The mate had a theory that at the moment of the desertion of the ship this fellow had started plundering, and that the captain in an attempt to preserve discipline had struck him down with a hatchet or some other heavy weapon. It seemed more probable than any other explanation, and yet did not entirely satisfy me.

The heavy box was slung up by ropes onto the deck of the Mary Sinclair and was carried by four seamen into the cabin, where between the table and the after lockers there was just space for it to stand. There it remained during supper, and after that meal the mates remained with me and discussed over a glass of grog the event of the day. Mr. Armstrong was a long, thin, vulture-like man, an excellent seaman, but famous for his nearness and cupidity. Our treasure trove had excited him greatly, and already he had begun with glistening eyes to reckon up how much it might be worth to each of us when the shares of the salvage came to be divided.

"If the paper said that they were unique, Mr. Barclay, then they may be worth anything that you like to name. You wouldn't believe the sums that the rich collectors give."

"I don't think that," said I. "As far as I can see they are not very different from any other South American curios."

"Well, sir, I've traded there for 14 voyages, and I have never seen anything like that chest before. That's worth a pile of money, just as it stands. But it's so heavy that surely there must be something valuable inside it. Don't you think that we ought to open it and see?"

"If you break it open you will spoil it, likely as not," said the second mate.

Armstrong squatted down in front of it, with his head on one side and his long, thin nose within a few inches of the lock.

"If I had a chisel," said he, "or a strong-bladed knife I could force the lock back without doing any damage at all."

The mention of a strong-bladed knife made me think of the dead seaman upon the brig.

"I wonder if he could have been on the job when someone came to interfere with him?" said I.

"I don't know about that, sir; but I am perfectly certain that I could open the box. There's a screwdriver here in the locker. Just hold the lamp, Allardyce, and I'll have it done in a brace of shakes."

"Wait a bit," said I, for already, with eyes which gleamed with curiosity and with avarice he was stooping over the lid. "I don't see that there is any hurry over this matter. You've read that card which warns us not to open it. It may mean anything or it may mean nothing, but somehow I feel inclined to obey it. After all, whatever is in it will keep."

The first officer ... bitterly disappointed at my decision. "Surely, sir, you are not superstitious about it?" said he, with a slight sneer upon his thin lips. "If it gets out of our own hands, and we don't see for ourselves what is in it, we may be done out of our rights; besides—"

"That's enough, Mr. Armstrong," said I, abruptly. "You may have every confidence that you will get your rights, but I will not have that box opened tonight."

Armstrong threw the screwdriver down upon the table and shrugged his shoulders. "Just as you like," said he, but for the rest of the evening, although we spoke upon many subjects, I noticed that his eyes were continually coming round, with the same expression of curiosity and greed, to the old striped box.

The main cabin had the rooms of the officers round it, but mine was the farthest away from it, at the end of the little passage which led to the companion. No regular watch was kept by me except in cases of emergency, and the three mates divided the watches among them. Armstrong had the middle watch, which ends at 4 o'clock, and he was relieved by Allardyce. For my part, I have always been one of the soundest of sleepers and it is rare for anything less than a hand upon my shoulder to arouse me.

And yet, I was aroused that night, or rather in the early gray of the morning. It was just 4:30 by my chronometer when something caused me to sit up in my berth, wide awake and with every nerve tingling. It was a sound of some sort, a crash with a human cry at the end of it, which still jarred upon my ears. I sat listening, but all was now silent. And yet, it could not have been imagination, that hideous cry, for the echo of it still rang in my head, and it seemed to have come from some place quite close to me. I sprang from my bunk and pulling on some clothes, I made my way into the cabin.

I first saw nothing unusual there. In the cold, gray light I made out the red-clothed table, the six rotating chairs, the walnut lockers, the swinging barometer, and there, at the end, the big striped chest. I was turning away with the intention of going upon deck and asking the second mate if he had heard anything when my eye fell upon something which projected from under the table. It was the leg of a man—a leg with a long seaboot upon it. I stooped, and there was a figure sprawling upon his face, his arms thrown forward and his body twisted. One glance told me that it was Armstrong, the first officer, and a second that he was a dead man. For a few moments I stood gasping. Then I rushed on to the deck, called Allardyce to my assistance and came back with him into the cabin.

Together we pulled the unfortunate fellow from under the table, and as we looked at his dripping head we exchanged glances, and I do not know which was the paler of the two.

"The same as the Spanish sailor," said I.

"The very same. God preserve us! It's that infernal chest! Look at Armstrong's hand!"

He held up the mate's right hand, and there was the screwdriver which he had wished to use the night before.

"He's been at the chest, sir. He knew that I was on deck and you asleep. He knelt down in front of it, and he pushed the lock back with that tool. Then something happened to him and he cried out so that you heard him."

"Allardyce," I whispered, "what could have happened to him?"

The second mate put his hand upon my sleeve and drew me into his cabin.

"We can talk here, sir, and we don't know who may be listening to us in there. What do you suppose is in that box, Captain Barclay?"

"I give you my word, Allardyce, that I have no idea."

"Well, I can only find one theory which will fit all the facts. Look at the size of the box. Look at the carving and metal work which may conceal any number of holes. Look at the weight of it; it took four men to carry it. On the top of that, remember that two men have tried to open it and both have come to their end through it. Now, sir, what can it mean except one thing?"

"You mean there is a man in it?"

"Of course, there is a man in it. You know how it is in these South American states, sir. A man may be president one week and hunted like a dog the next, for they are forever flying for their lives. My idea is that there is some fellow in hiding there, who is armed and desperate, and who will fight to the death before he is taken."

"But his food and drink?"

"It's a roomy chest, sir, and he may have some provisions stowed away. As to his drink, he had a friend among the crew upon the brig who saw that he had what he needed."

"Have you any other way of explaining the facts?"

"I have to confess that I had not."

"The question is, What are we to do?" I asked.

"The man's a dangerous ruffian who sticks at nothing. I'm thinking it wouldn't be a bad thing to put a rope around the chest and tow it alongside for half an hour. Then we could open it at our ease. Or if we just tied the box up and kept him from getting any water, maybe that would do as well. Or the carpenter could put a coat of varnish over it and stop all the blowholes."

"Come, Allardyce," said I, angrily. "You don't seriously mean to say that a whole ship's company are going to be terrorized by a man in a box. If he's there, I'll engage to fetch him out." I went to my room and came back with my revolver in my hand. "Now, Allardyce," said I, "do you open the lock and I'll stand on guard."

"For God's sake, think what you are doing, sir!" cried the mate. "Two men have lost their lives over it, and the blood of one not yet dry on the carpet."

"The more reason why we should revenge him."

"Well, sir, at least let me call the carpenter. Three are better than two, and he is a good, stout man."

He went off in search of him, and I was left alone with the striped chest in the cabin. I don't think that I'm a nervous man, but I kept the table between me and this solid old relic of the Spanish Main. Presently the carpenter and the mate came back together, the former with a hammer in his hand.

"It's a bad business this, sir," said he, shaking his head as he looked at the body of the mate. "And you think there's someone hiding in the box?"

"There's no doubt about it," said Allardyce, picking up the screwdriver and setting his jaw like a man who needs to brace his courage. "I'll drive the lock back if you'll both stand by. If he raises, let him have it on the head with your hammer, carpenter. Shoot at once, sir, if he raises his hand. Now!"
